Soviet Fleet To Hunt Down Pirate Subs; Blames Italy

Mystery Periscope Seen in Black Sea

U. S. Vessels Ordered to Fire if Attacked in Mediterranean.

The Mediterranean Crisis.

Russia was reported to have ordered her Black Sea fleet into the Mediterranean to join the French and British navies in a war on "pirate" submarines.

Thousands of indignation meetings were held throughout the Soviet Union to protest "the heinous crime of Italian pirates" in sinking Russian merchant ships.

United States warships in the Mediterranean were ordered to fire in self-defense if they are attacked.

Russia Accuses Italy.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, Sept. 3.—Soviet Russia, blaming "Italy's Fascist dogs and cut-throats" for the sinking of two Soviet steamers in four days, prepared tonight to send her warships into the Mediterranean to join the British and French navies in a war on "pirate" submarines.

It was reported in Paris that Russia has decided to send her Black Sea fleet into the Mediterranean to protect her shipping.

There was a hint from Pravda, official Communist organ, that Russia might not wait for agreement on a plan of international reprisal, but would "administer a decisive blow to the war-monger pirates and make them pay dearly."

The British and French fleets mobilized hurriedly on a wartime scale, and tonight 89 of their swiftest ships rode into the Mediterranean.

The Russian preparations were spurred by thousands of indignation meetings throughout the Soviet Union.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ohio, Sept. 3.—Four holdup-abductors matched pistol fire with police machine guns today in a battle that left two officers and a bandit dead, another robber dying and a third officer wounded.

Two bandits escaped.

Hunted for a $1,290 robbery in which their victim was abducted from a downtown street, the bandits were trapped in a lake resort cottage 15 miles southwest of here. They tried to shoot their way out and killed Chief Deputy Edward Furry, 45, and City Patrolman Martin Randolph, 38.

One man identified by Police Capt. Lawrence Abbott as William Y. Cornetti, of Portsmouth, Ohio, fell dead, his body punctured by a hail of police bullets

Student Leader Tells How Aide Looted Cafe

'Master Mind' Implicates Cab Driver and Confederate; Suspected of 25 Other Robberies Here; Wife Believed Only a 'Tool.'

By Eugene Warner.

Sobbing bitterly, a 22-year-old George Washington University student, "brains" of a robber gang here, came to the end of crime's trail in the office of Detective Inspector Bernard Thompson yesterday, as he confessed plotting the $1,192 holdup of the S. & W. Cafeteria last Tuesday. He is suspected of some 25 other robberies here.

Alfred Herman Brauer, whose apartment was filled with criminology treatises, who once talked himself out of arrest, and whose fingerprints were covered with a print-smudging powder, broke down when, after three days of worry during which he could not eat, he was given a sandwich by Police Chief Maj. Brown.

As he gratefully munched the sandwich, police said he told a remarkable tale of carefully planned robbery, implicating his pretty 19-year-old wife, Jane, a taxi driver,

New Regulation May Shut Down Capital Airport

Big Ships Limited to One Runway; Can't Land if Wind Blows.

A new and drastic regulation applying to the Washington-Hoover Airport, which will sharply curtail airline service there, was announced late yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Roper. It will go into effect Tuesday.

As the result of this regulation and President Roosevelt's veto of a bill that would have enlarged the airport, there is a strong possibility, The Post learned last night, the field will be abandoned.

The regulation promulgated by Secretary Roper, whose department embraces the Bureau of Air Commerce, applies to transport planes of a gross weight of 15,000 pounds or more, which, in this case, means the big Douglas planes.

Remiled to One Runway.

First, these planes may land or take off on only one runway, the long one running NNW-SSE. Heretofore, they also have used the shorter east-west runway.

Second, the 15,000-pound ships may not land or take off on this long runway if "the cross-wind velocity component relative to such runway exceeds 10 miles per hour."

Samuel J. Solomon, manager of the Washington-Hoover Airport, said last night the regulation would apply to all the Douglas planes, and he added three out of four transport ships using the field are Douglases.

Solomon said there would be a meeting of the directors of the airport corporation Wednesday to consider what policy to adopt.

Mrs. Hartig Loses Operator's Permit Without Hearing

Mrs. Jeanette Hartig, prominent golfer, will be served with a notice her operator's permit has been suspended by the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Traffic Department, police announced yesterday.

This procedure of suspension is unusual, as permit suspension usually follows a trial. However, the board has the authority to take this action.

Mrs. Hartig was arrested recently after she allegedly hit six parked cars on Thirteenth street, between Emerson and Jefferson streets. Damage was estimated at $300.

Lewis Warns Roosevelt to 'Keep Faith'

C. I. O. Head Threatens Reprisals in Next Election.

Condemns Davey and Chicago Mayor for Violence.

By Sidney Olson.

John L. Lewis, burly chief of the Committee for Industrial Organization and the foremost figure in American labor, last night challenged President Roosevelt and the Democratic Party to keep faith with labor or suffer reprisals at the polls.

Like a mailed fist wrapped in cellophane, Lewis' challenge to the President and the party was veiled so thinly as to be completely obvious to those who listened to his half-hour radio broadcast.

He slapped at the President for failing to come to the aid of labor in the recent widespread industrial struggle. Speaking slowly and emphasizing every word, he said:

"It ill behooves one who has supped at labor's table and who has been sheltered in labor's house to curse with equal fervor and fine impartiality both labor and its adversaries when they become locked in deadly embrace."

Refers to President's Quip.

Obviously the shag-maned master of the C. I. O. referred to the President's jocular press-conference remark, when Mr. Roosevelt quoted Shakespeare's line, "A plague o' both your houses!" to indicate his neutrality in labor controversies.

Lewis demanded that labor's friends "should not view its struggle with neutral detachment or intone constant criticisms of its activities." He threatened directly:

"Those who chant their praises of democracy, but who lose no chance to drive their knives into labor's defenseless back must feel the weight of labor's woe, even as its open adversaries must ever feel the thrust of labor's power."

During his broadcast, carried nationally by the Columbia Broadcasting System, Lewis endeavored to emphasize that the C. I O.'s objectives "are not political in a partisan sense."

Urges Resort to Polls.

But throughout the speech, in his appeal to farmers to join hands with labor to obtain a larger share of the national income, in his direct assaults by name on Mayor Edward Kelly, of Chicago, and Gov. Martin Davey, of Ohio, Lewis urged labor to march to the polls and defeat its foes.

Lewis said Kelly "came to Washington looking for political patronage" shortly after the Memorial Day shootings and "that patronage was forthcoming" and said the "steel puppet, Davey, is still Governor of Ohio, but not for long, I think."

At their "suggestion" Lewis agreed to leave out a word in one passage of his text, change two others, and omit a whole paragraph in another, they said.

The single word was an adjective

California Flier Shatters Mark In Bendix Race

Col. Turner's Record Falls; German Stunt Ace Crashes Unhurt.

By the United Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 3.—Frank W. Fuller, jr., San Francisco sportsman-flier, shot his low-wing Seversky fighter across the continent today to set a new Bendix Trophy record and win $13,000 prize money in the opening event of the 1937 National Air Races.

Fuller paced six other Bendix fliers into Cleveland. He dipped over Municipal Airport 7 hours 54 minutes and 26 seconds after leaving Union Air Terminal at Los Angeles and continued on to Bendix, N. J., to break the mark set by Col. Roscoe Turner in 1934.

Earl Ortman, of Los Angeles, took $5,000 second-place money in the Bendix race. His elapsed time was 9 hours 49 minutes 21 seconds.

Other Bendix winners and their prize money were: Jacqueline Cochran, New York, $3,000; Frank Sinclair, $2,000; Milo Burcham, Los Angeles, $1,000. Earl C. Sundorph, Cleveland, was in sixth place.

The 25-mile closed-course Amelia Earhart trophy race for women was won easily by Gladys O'Donnell, of Long Beach, Calif.

The second crash in 24 hours occurred shortly after the announcement of Fuller's record-shattering performance. Count Otto Hagenburg, of Germany, internationally famous acrobatic pilot, cracked up his Buecker pursuit plane as he was flying inverted 4 feet above the turf in front of the grandstands.

The Count stepped grinning from the wreckage.

Il Duce to Fly To Berlin for Hitler Parley

By the United Press.

Berlin, Sept. 3.—Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy, will come to Germany soon to confer with Fuehrer Adolph Hitler on "a new relationship in a gigantic and revolutionary movement," it was announced officially tonight.

It was generally believed that Il Duce, flying across the Alps in his own plane, would arrive in Berlin either on September 22 or 23, although the official announcement of his historic visit—coming at a moment when Europe is stirred to anger by Nazi-Fascist intervention in the Spanish civil war—did not reveal the date.

There were indications tonight that Mussolini will act as a mediator in an effort to solve the widening controversy between the Vatican and the Third Reich over the Catholic Church troubles in Germany.

Man Who Locked Baby in Car Seized Here as Bigamist

Police said Moore had married three times. His first wife, they said, he divorced before marrying Ina L. Moore, of Detroit. But when he came to Washington to marry his latest mate, it was charged he failed to divorce his Detroit wife.

Hitler Would Link Germany, England, U. S.

Published Letter Favors Union in Interests of White People.

By the Associated Press.

London (Saturday), Sept. 4.—The Daily Mail today reproduced a letter it said was from Chancellor Adolf Hitler favoring a combination of the United States, Great Britain and Germany to insure peace and preserve "the interests of the white people."

The letter, addressed to Lord Rothermere, publisher of the newspaper, said in part:

"Nine-tenths of the blood poured out during the last 300 years in Europe has been wasted. In those 300 years, Germany has lost from 20 to 25 million lives in wars which were intrinsically without benefit to the nation, if benefit is estimated in terms of practical advantage rather than dubious prestige.

"All hope for the future is dead, so far as the human eye can see, unless it comes from England and Germany."

It urged an Anglo-German agreement and the calling of a conference of the mandatory powers to examine Germany's claims for colonies.

"If this understanding could be still further enlarged by the adhesion of the American nation, it would be absolutely impossible to see who in the world could disturb a combination for peace which would never, of set purpose or intent, neglect the interest of the white people.

"We have in Germany a fine proverb 'The gods love and bless those who seem to strive for the impossible.' That is a divinity in which I believe."

Charles Town, W. Va., Sept. 3.—State Banking Commissioner George Ward tonight said the Farmers Bank & Trust Co., of this city, was short $500,000 or more. He has been checking the books since Wednesday.

Japanese Flee.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Sept. 3.—Eight Japanese troopships fled down the Whangpoo River today to escape destructive Chinese gunfire as China's furious counteroffensive made further inroads on the narrow strip of territory the Japanese had occupied around Shanghai.

Meanwhile an ominous new note was injected into the Far Eastern situation with reports from Harbin, Manchukuo, that two Soviet Russian gunboats had disregarded the frontier, penetrated 31 miles into the far northeast Manchukuoan province of Sankiang and captured a number of Manchukuo residents.

The Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported the gunboats, coming down the Hulin River to the town of Hulin, picked up the Manchukuoans and carried them into Siberia.

New peril to foreign lives and interests within International Shanghai arose as the Chinese struck effectively with artillery at Japanese naval concentrations on the Whangpoo, Shanghai's outlet to the sea.

At Pootung, just across the Whangpoo from Shanghai, and elsewhere Japanese attempts to land fresh troops or advance those already landed were stopped.

Thousands of fresh casualties were added on both sides in the fierce fighting that has continued 24 hours without interruption since the Japanese announced a "big push" to wipe out Chinese resistance in Shanghai, and the Chinese stopped the "big push" cold.

The present desperate plight of the Japanese invading forces was indicated when a spokesman for Vice Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa,

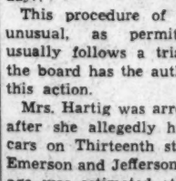
Girl Writer Tries a Professional Escort; Finds Him Efficient

By Jean Brownell,

(Our girl reporter, who really is getting too many ideas, wanted to spend an evening with a professional escort. Well she did and here is the result.)

He was almost as nervous as I was when I opened the apartment door in answer to his knock—but he concealed his trepidation more successfully. After all, he has been in the professional escort business nearly three months, and it was my first experience with a custom-made date.



JEAN BROWNELL.

The receptionist at the National Escort Bureau, where I placed my order by telephone, had been confident she could supply just the type of tall blond I wanted as a companion for an evening's tour of the District's night spots and she was as good as her word. Tall and blond he was, with a classic Grecian profile into the bargain.

Following her instructions, I carried my wrap and purse to the door. "We ask our gentlemen not to enter the lady's room at any time," she had said in a brisk yet sympathetic tone calculated to set the most embarrassed clients at their ease.

As we stood in the hall, he handed me a card with his name, Jack Smith, typed below the name and address of the bureau. And—again following the bureau's instructions—I gave him two envelopes. One, labeled "Fee," contained $5 for the first three hours' entertainment, plus $2, the charge made for each additional hour. (The rate would have been slightly higher had I asked that the gentleman wear evening clothes.)

In the other envelope was the $10 bill which the receptionist estimated would cover dinner, drinks, cover charges and taxis for the two of us. During our telephone conversation, she had outlined an evening's entertainment which she considered appropriate for just such a client as me—an unsophisticated young thing here for a few days from Pittsfield, Mass., eager to see more of the big city than I could in company with the maiden aunt I was visiting.

During dinner at the Volga Boatman he confided that the reason for his initial tremors was his constant uncertainty as to whether he would feel at ease with that evening's customer. "It's this nervous excitement that keeps the job from becoming monotonous," he said. "Excitement, and meeting someone new every time, and trying to analyze each one."

"I've analyzed you already," he added, but I didn't dare ask him what conclusion he had reached.

The chief problem for the first hour or so is maintaining a conversation with his "date." "I ask them about three key questions,"

U. S. Ready to Sell Helium to World for Commercial and Medical Use Only

Stringent Rules To Guard Gas Are Prepared

State Secretary to Take Applications; Price Unannounced.

By the United Press.

The United States last night offered some of its precious store of helium to other world powers, but stipulated that the noninflammable gas must be used for aeronautical and medical purposes and not as a military weapon.

The National Munitions Control Board of the State Department made public strict regulations governing export of the gas which is produced only in this country and in Russia.

A bill authorizing helium export was passed by the Seventy-fifth Congress after the German dirigible Hindenburg, inflated with hydrogen, exploded at Lakehurst, N. J.

Virtual Federal Monopoly.

Under the bill, the Federal Government, through the Department of Interior, would acquire a dominating interest, amounting to a virtual monopoly, in helium production.

Besides being used for inflating airliners, helium is of great medical value in the treatment of respiratory diseases.

One section of the bill provides the gas shall not be sold "for the inflation of any airship operating between two foreign countries, notwithstanding such airship may also touch at some point in the United States."

Thus, an airliner plying between the United States and Germany could not obtain helium, under the law, if it had other ports of call in third countries.

Less Stringent Law Sought.

An attempt will be made at the next session of Congress to relax some of the measure's more stringent provisions. When the measure was rushed through in the last night of the session, and amended in the House, Senator Elbert Thomas (Democrat), Utah, charged that the House amendment barring use of the gas in liners calling at any "third" country rendered the bill almost useless.

A British dirigible operating between the United States and England, could not call at Canadian airports under the act, it was pointed out.

It was understood the Germans, relying on American helium, plan to establish a transatlantic service and then use helium in a group of smaller Zeppelins wihch would collect cargo in Germany and haul it to Franfort, headquarters of the larger transatlantic liners.

Applications to State Secretary.

Applications for export of helium will be obtained through the Secretary of State.

The regulations make no mention of price. Helium is so rare as to be almost prohibitive in price.

For medical, scientific and commercial use, the regulations provide that not more than 20,000 feet can be sold annually to any one purchaser, nor more than 500,000 cubic feet to purchasers in any one country.

No "ceiling" was set on exports for aeronautical purposes, but it was explained that the board could adjust these exports to current needs.

Section 213 Repeal Enables Policeman To Wed War Clerk

Because of the "marriage-clause" repeal, Otto C. Hauschild, 58, a police private, who has been attached to the corporation counsel's office for 25 years, was able to wed Miss Nellie Blanche McReynolds, 44, a clerk in the War Department. They were married Thursday night.

Hauschild said yesterday he and Miss McReynolds would have married some time ago had it not been for section 213, which prohibited man and wife both to hold Government positions.

They were married at the Keller Memorial Luthern Church by the Rev. S. T. Nicholas. The bride is a native of Floris, Ohio, where the couple will spend their honeymoon.

When they return, October 15, they will live at 2515 K street.

By Franklyn Waltman

IN recent days much has been said and written about American interests and rights in China. It is the protection of these which is the problem before the United States Government in the present Sino-Japanese conflict. What specifically are these American interests and rights?

WALTMAN.

American interests in China may be divided between "tangible interests" and "intangible interests." The "tangible interests"—which can be measured—constitute the Americans who have homes in China, places of business there, sources of supply, customers there and money invested in property or loaned to the government.

There are all sorts of estimates of the various sums involved, some of which include items omitted by others. The statistics regarding China given here have been obtained from the most reliable available sources. They are based on the findings by Prof. Carl F. Remer in his study of 'Foreign Investments in China," by far the most comprehensive inquiry into this subject, and other studies, and on consultation with the best experts in the Government.

Prof. Remer estimates the value of the total American holdings in China at the end of 1930 at $239,895,313. Incidentally, the best thought among the Government experts is that the value of these holdings today is approximately what it was in 1930. Perhaps the round figure of $250,000,000 is as good an estimate as possible of the value of American holdings in China at this time.

This figure includes three classifications of American holdings: (1) American business investment in China, estimated by Remer at $155,112,778; (2) American holdings of Chinese government securities and obligations, estimated by Remer at $41,711,346, and (3) the value of property held by American missionary and philanthropic groups in China, valued by Remer at $43,071,189.

Excluding property of American missions and philanthropic societies, Remer estimated the total American investment in China at $196,824,124, which today is possibly slightly more than $200,000,000—just a fraction of America's present day foreign holdings of approximately $12,000,000,000, exclusive of war debts—and only a fraction of the $3,300,000,000 foreign investment in China.

Before the recent wholesale evacuation of Americans from China, there were roughly about 6,000 residing in that country. What do they do? About 2,500 were engaged in missionary, educational and philanthropic work. The remaining 3,500 included those engaged in many types of work—running public utilities, oil companies, textile factories, banks, export and import houses and the like—and their families. Approximately 4,000 of these Americans lived in Shanghai.

Of the $155,000,000 of American business investment in China, approximately two-thirds is located in Shanghai, now under the Japanese guns. There are approximately 550 American business firms in China, but only about 200 are, in any sense, large. There are only 17 American firms in China with investments over $1,000,000 each, but these 17 account for 82 per cent of the total American investment.

There are six American oil companies, led by Standard Oil, with an investment in China of $42,000,000. The Shanghai Power Co. is owned by the American & Foreign Power Co., and has a franchise for a 40-year monopoly in the Foreign Settlement of Shanghai. The Shanghai Telephone Co. is controlled by the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., which, in turn, is American owned. The value of the two utilities is set at $35,000,000.

There are four American banks in China: The National City Bank, with nine offices; the American Express Co., with four offices; the Equitable Eastern Banking Corporation, with two offices, and the American-Oriental Banking Corporation, with two offices. Their total investment in China is $25,00,000 with approximately $800,000 located in Shanghai.

But these American holdings do not represent all the tangible, measurable interests of this country in China. Another is our foreign trade with China. In 1935, this country exported to China goods having a value of $38,156,000. Last year these exports had a value of $46,819,000. In the first five months of this year, exports to China totaled $26,256,000.

Chinese exports to the United States in 1935 were valued at $64,164,000; in 1936, at $74,340,000, and in the first five months of this year, at $51,653,000. Thus last year the foreign trade between the two countries had a value of $121,159,000, and until the present Sino-Japanese conflict, the prospects were it would be much greater this year.

China buys from us in sizable quantities raw cotton, lumber, gasoline, petroleum and lubricating oils, tobacco leaf, automobiles, trucks and airplanes. From China we buy raw silk, carpet wool, goatskins, tung oil (our foremost import from China), bristles, antimony, sesamum seeds and tea. Tea, however, has become a negligible item of Sino-American trade.

Even though Sino-American trade has shown a substantial increase in the last two years, it has had better days—much better. For instance, in the depression year of 1933, we sold to China more than we sold to her last year, although we did not buy as much. In 1934, we sold to China $68,000,000 of goods. In 1920, we sold $145,737,000 worth of goods to China, and for 1929, the figure was $124,163,000.

Aside from the world depression, Chinese foreign trade was drastically shaken by the instability of silver prices. As a result of the American silver program of 1934 China was shaken to its economic foundations and that accounts for the precipitate drop in Sino-American trade in 1935. But the American policy forced China to reform its monetary system and now is on a sounder basis.

The success of the undertaking, along with the greater measure of political stability in the Nanking government, has aroused hopes in this country for far greater trade possibilities in China than now enjoyed. That is one reason why trade with China is considered of greater importance than perhaps the current statistics would indicate.

Indeed, Americans always have had dreams about the trade possibilities of the huge Chinese empire with its 450,000,000 population. There comes to mind the suggestion that if every Chinese wore a tail on his shirt, the increased demand for cotton cloth would end for all time the troubles of American cotton fields and mills. California fruit growers have smiled broadly in their sleep as they dream of the result if each Chinese could be persuaded to eat one prune each week.

But here we are dealing with tangibles and realities. Compared with China, Japan is a much better customer of the United States. American exports to Japan in 1935 had a value of $203,000,000; in 1936, of $204,348,000, and in the first five months of this year of $140,000,000. In other words, in the first five months of this year Japan bought from the United States three times as much as China did all of last year—more than five times as much as in the same period this year.

Moreover, whereas we buy more from China than that country does from us; we sell more to Japan than we buy. American imports from Japan had a value in 1935 of $153,000,000; in 1936, of $171,704,000, and in the first five months of this year, of $92,392,000.

American direct investments in Japan are valued by the Commerce Department at approximately $218,000,000, which is some $60,000,000 greater than the comparable figure for China. Americans hold approximately $180,000,000 of Japanese bonds—a sum more than four times greater than the American holding of Chinese obligations—and the Japanese bonds are not in default.

These facts should indicate rather clearly that in their sympathy for China, this Government and country are not pursuing dollar diplomacy. Our material interests are greater in Japan. But here we have dealt only with the economic, tangible aspects of America's relation to the Far East. There are many other facets to the situation, among them being not only holdings, but rights and privileges and therefore obligations and responsibilities and, above all, the broad aspect of maintaining world peace and modern civilization.

Franklyn Waltman, in the Third Section of The Washington Post tomorrow will discuss American policy in the Far East.

C.I.O. Threatens Reprisals If Democrats Do Not Keep Faith.

The speech was the nearest approach by Lewis toward confirmation of the long-rumored break between him and the President. Until last election day Lewis was one of the President's foremost supporters, pushing into the Democratic campaign pot a $500,000 contribution from his United Mine Workers and traveling on the Roosevelt train in the last campaign swing to introduce the President to massed audiences in Pennsylvania.

Lewis heaped his scorn on the Democrats in Congress who failed to thrust wages-hours legislation through over Southern opposition. He said:

"The spectacle of august and dignified members of Congress, servants of the people and agents of the Republic, skulking in hallways and closets, hiding their faces in a party caucus to prevent a quorum from acting upon a labor measure, is one that emphasizes the perfidy of politicians and blasts the confidence of labor's millions in politicians' promises and statesmen's vows."

Claims 3,718,000 Men.

Lewis claimed a numerical enrollment of 3,718,000 members for the C. I. O. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, recently claimed 3,600,000 members in the A. F. of L.

Lewis, after stating that in the steel strike "18 steel workers were shot to death or had their brains clubbed out by police and armed thugs in the pay of steel companies," struck directly at Kelly of Chicago and Davey, saying:

"None but strikers were murdered, gassed, injured, jailed or maltreated. No one had to die except the workers who were standing for the right guaranteed them by the Congress and written in the law.

"Davey of Ohio, successful in the last election because of his reiterated promises of fair treatment to labor, used the military power of the Commonwealth on the side of the Republic Steel Co. and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co."

Lewis then charged that nearly half of the heavy expenditure for the military was borne by the Federal Government. He went on:

"The steel workers have now buried their dead, while the widows weep and watch their orphaned children become objects of public charity." He then pointed out that no State or Federal officers of Government, have yet rebuked these "murders."

Cites Moral Code.

"Some of them, in extenuation," he boomed, "plead lack of jurisdiction, but murder as a crime against the moral code can always be rebuked without regard to the niceties of legalistic jurisdiction by those who profess to be the keepers of the public conscience."

Lewis named the National Manufacturers Association, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and other industrial groups of similar type as groups "encouraging systematic organization of vigilante groups to fight unionization under the sham pretext of local interests."

Lewis vigorously denied any taint of Communism in his C. I. O., asserting that "this foolish cry" has been "hatched" by persons fearing shorter hours, higher wages and better homes and so forth for labor.

9 Super-Highways Urged by Snyder

By the Associated Press.

Representative Snyder (Democrat), Pennsylvania, advocate of greater national defense, said yesterday he will urge the next Congress to finance nine super-highways over which armed forces could move speedily to repel an invader at any point.

Three routes would be from coast to coast and six from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. Each would be 200 feet wide and there would be a huge airport at each of the 18 intersections.

Snyder, chairman of a House sub-committee handling the military appropriation bill, estimated the total cost at $8,000,000,000.

Swarthmore, Pa., Sept. 3 (AP).—Employers should support their workers during slack seasons, care for them when they are thrown out of jobs by labor-saving machinery, and charge it up to expenses of doing business, a commission recommended today to the world conference of the Society of Friends.

"This is as much a legitimate charge on the expenses of doing business as is care and protection of machinery and equipment during a shutdown," reported the commission headed by Dr. J. Russell Smith, of Swarthmore, professor of economic geography of Columbia University.

Belchite Falls; Franco's Wire Links Severed

Threat to Isolate Capital Smashed, Nationalist Chiefs Report.

By the United Press.

Madrid, Sept. 3.—Loyalist legions, led by the international brigade and Asturian miners, late today captured the town of Belchite, in the heart of insurgents' Teruel salient, the war office announced.

Belchite had been surrounded by the loyalists for four days, but a valiant garrison of rebels maintained a steady fire from a fortified seminary and the city hall.

Loyalist leaders said occupation of the town severed Generalissimo Francisco Franco's communications between Saragoza, 22 miles north, and Teruel, the spearhead of his Aragon salient.

"We have smashed the enemy's threat to cut the Madrid-Valencia highway and isolate the capital," a war office spokesman said.

The invaders were said to have found the streets of Belchite littered with 1,500 corpses, victims of days of artillery siege. More than 500 prisoners were taken.

Gijon's Fall Imminent.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Sept. 3 (AP).—The last remnant of Spanish government territory in northwest Spain, a strip of about 90 square miles on the Bay of Biscay, tonight was shrinking rapidly. With insurgent legions sweeping from three directions on Gijon, last government stronghold in the Biscayan country, most government sympathizers were resigned to its loss.

Poland Conceals Paderewski Plea To Banish Strife

Warsaw, Sept. 3 (AP).—An appeal for political peace and a warning against the ills of Fascism penned by Poland's aging pianist-statesman, Jan Ignace Paderewski, from Switzerland today failed to reach the Polish masses.

The government, headed by the militant Gen. Edward Rydz-Smigly, promptly suppressed the appeal, explaining that the former premier had been long removed from politics. Paderewski has not visited Poland since 1920.

Only two papers escaped the censorship. They carried the statement which warned Poland against civil war. Paderewski pleaded for a more liberal policy, asking amnesty for political prisoners and asserting that "the wall" between government and people "should be removed" to prevent "internal shock."

Father and Son Sentenced to Die In Torch Murder

Boston, Sept. 3 (AP).—In the Massachusetts State prison death house two men sat tonight, speaking not to each other even though they were father and son.

They were Frank Di Stasio, 54-year-old Revere baker and his son Anthony, 26.

Barring legal interruption they will die in the electric chair on the night of September 13 for the "torch murder" of Daniel Crowley, Boston laborer, whose charred body was found in the father's burned automobile in June, 1936.

The father was convicted of slaying Crowley. The son was convicted as an accessory.

Today they met as they were taken to the death house. Only a slight nod gave sign they knew each other.

Tammany Coup Checked by Court

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—The forces of Jeremiah T. Mahoney, choice of pro-Roosevelt Democratic leaders for mayor of New York, won a first engagement today against the plan of Tammany to put its own election inspectors in districts regarded generally as favoring Mahoney.

They obtained an order directing the Board of Elections to show cause why a peremptory writ of mandamus should not compel the reinstatement of the original election officials, removed yesterday at Tammany's insistence.

Mahoney had protested that the Tammany coup was an effort to steal the election machinery.

Hongkong Storm Deaths Climb 300

Hongkong, Sept. 3 (AP).—The death toll of the devastating typhoon which swirled over Hongkong Thursday rose tonight when it was disclosed at least 300 died at one point where a 6-foot tidal wave was hurled half a mile inland by the mighty wind. It was still impossible to estimate the loss of life at sea.

Strong gales still whipped Hongkong Harbor and nearby waters, but the main storm roared on to the north, hugging the China coast. Weather men said it probably would strike again with destructive force, perhaps between Amoy and Foochow on the Fukien coast, and likely would pass close to war-crippled Shanghai.

Son of Confessed Holdup 'Master Mind'

At the home of a relative in Clarendon, Va., Alfred Herman Brauer, jr., contentedly sucks his fingers while his young father and mother sit in jail in Washington. Police say the father, a 22-year-old George Washington University student, has confessed to "master minding" the holdup of the S. & W. Cafeteria Tuesday night.

and a confederate, who is still at large with the bulk of the loot from their last job. Detectives found $419 on Brauer's person, they said.

Wife an 'Innocent Tool.'

Brauer, a handsome, brilliant young man, was described by detectives as being the son of a Virginia family, the father being in Government service here. His wife comes from a distinguished family in Nevada. Police were inclined to believe she was an innocent tool of her husband.

The collapse of a prosperous young career in crime was brought about by the shrewdness of detectives who outwitted the best efforts of the scholar criminal. His most perfectly planned crime turned out to be his last, but only after some fast and slick maneuvers on both sides.

For more than a week, police said Brauer's confession revealed, the student had thought out every detail of the S. & W. holdup, his biggest enterprise, to date. With his wife, police said Brauer studied the large cafeteria, and, in fact, was in the restaurant when the robbery was committed and was still there, grinning, when police and reporters arrived on the scene a few moments after the alarms were sounded.

According to detectives, the plan was for Brauer and his wife, mother of a 5-weeks-old baby, to taxi to the restaurant with a confederate who was to perform the actual stickup. Brauer and his wife sat at a table near the cashier eating dinner while their confederate quietly poked an automatic under the nose of the cashier and made off with $1,192.50.

There to "Cover Up."

While the holdup man was backing out the door, the master mind of the robbery dawdled over his coffee, expressing complete amazement when police rushed in and informed the late diners present a robbery had taken place. Brauer told detectives he was there in case of emergency, to "cover" the getaway in case help was needed.

The robbery went off smoothly indoors, but outdoors a real emergency developed in the person of H. R. Wilson, of Baltimore, who was just entering his car when he noticed the robber carrying two moneybags, leap into a waiting taxicab and drive east on G street at a high rate of speed.

Wilson, pausing only to pick up a patrolman on his running board, chased the taxi and the fleeing holdup man in a wild ride through red lights, only to lose them. But shortly afterward the cab driver, William P. Allen, following Brauer's prearranged plan, appeared at the Third Precinct to tell what he knew about the holdup. He explained to police the robber had thrust a gun in his back and forced him to drive away at top speed.

Police questioned him three hours and told newsmen he would be released, as he was "not implicated." But it was a ruse. Allen was allowed to walk out of the precinct station and get into his cab parked outside. He drove away. Reporters telephoned their papers Allen had been released, and the news was printed.

But Allen had not driven more than a block before a detective rose up from the floor of the tonneau where he had been crouching, and putting a gun at Allen's back, said, "O. K., Buddy, we're going to the Sixth Precinct." Allen was again jailed, but the word was out and in print he was free.

During the questioning of Allen, the cab driver had been bombarded with questions for three hours. He was compelled to retrace in his cab, accompanied by detectives, all his movements last Tuesday night. They suspected he was not telling the truth about some of his actions. Finally, he told everything.

Allen admitted, police said, that he had been hired to drive the cab and was to receive $50 for his part in the robbery. He named Brauer and Mrs. Brauer as planning the holdup, and also gave police the name of the man who wielded the gun. Police now have complete information on the case. They formed plans for catching the others.

The police plan then was to make Brauer believe all was well. Meanwhile, Detective Sergts. Joe Shimon, W. V. Christian and M. J. Mahaney went to Brauer's apartment in the 1900 block of Pennsylvania avenue northwest to lie in wait for the "master mind" of the gang. But Brauer was smarter than they thought. He stayed away. So did his wife.

It wasn't until Wednesday afternoon that the young couple was heard from. Mrs. Brauer appeared at the apartment and was arrested. But her husband was still at large. Detectives planned to trap him also. They removed Mrs. Brauer to the Woman's Bureau and took a woman to the apartment with them, hopeful he would telephone.

Next night the expected telephone call came. It was Brauer. The woman answered, saying she was friend of Mrs. Brauer and that Mrs. Brauer had gone to her aunt's home in Clarendon, Va., with the baby, and that she wanted her husband to meet her there. Brauer said over the 'phone he would.

But he was suspicious something was wrong. Yesterday morning, Brauer, driving in a new car he bought with his loot, was on his way to Virginia, when he became sure he was entering a trap. So he picked up a hitch-hiker at the corner of Water and Fourteenth streets and told the man he had been having marital troubles and offered the stranger $5 to ride back to the Pennsylvania avenue apartment to get word to his wife to meet in an Alexandria hotel. The hitch-hiker agreed. Brauer left him.

When the hitch-hiker, James W. Wilson, appeared at the apartment door, he was promptly arrested. He hastily explained he knew nothing about the robbery and told the story of the man who had given him $5 to arrange a rendezvous with his wife in the Alexandria hotel.

Arrested at Hotel.

Detective Joe Shimon at once speeded to the hotel to wait for Brauer. This time, feeling more secure, but still so uncertain he left his new car parked a block away, Brauer cautiously entered the hotel lobby. He was at once arrested and brought back to Washington.

Maj. Brown and Detective Inspector Thompson sympathized with him when he said he had been driving the streets night and day, afraid to go into a restaurant to eat for fear of being recognized. Maj. Brown sent Shimon, the same man who had arrested him, out for a sandwich and milk. When Brauer began to eat, he suddenly lost his nerve. He wept for 15 minutes. Brown patted him on the back and advised him to "tell all." The young man did.

In his apartment, police found two revolvers and a holster. They found numerous volumes on crime. They also found the brush end of a broom, the handle of which had been used in the S. & W. holdup to block doors in order to stall pursuit.

Police said they know the name of the fourth person in the little gang which is believed to have held up some 25 liquor stores and also is suspected of the Sanitary Grocery robbery at Fourteenth and Kenyon streets. The missing bandit, who actually committed the S. & W. holdup, is still at large with the balance of the $1,192.

Veterans Urge CCC Be Given War Training

Air Force Development Also Advocated by V. F. W.

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 3.—America's Veterans of Foreign Wars proposed today that the Civilian Conservation Corps be trained for national defense.

It "demanded" that America's 300,000 C. C. C. youths be enrolled in a permanent corps and "be recognized as a complement to our national defense."

They should be trained, the veterans said, to "serve their country more effectively in the event of a national emergency." The resolution suggested training in map reading, bridge building, the use of radio and communications.

A companion resolution urging further development of United States air forces also was adopted at the closing session. Earlier today, retiring Commander in Chief Bernard W. Kearney told the veterans the next war "will be fought almost entirely in the air," and declared the United States should strengthen this wing of its defense.

Another speaker, former Gov. David Sholtz, of Florida, exhorted the veterans to preserve American principles of freedom and liberty in the face of elements of Naziism, Fascism and Communism.

Scott P. Squyres, of Oklahoma City, Okla., was elected national commander in chief of the veterans. He succeeds Bernard W. Kearney, of Gloversvile, N. Y. Eugene I. Van Antwerp, of Detroit, Mich., was elected senior vice commander in chief.

Married 10 Years, 'Husband' Is Sued For $150,000 Balm

Los Angeles, Sept. 3 (AP).—A strange breach of promise suit, asking $150,000 damages, was filed today by Vera Reynolds, former film star, against Robert Ellis Reel, actor and writer, who has been known as her husband more than a decade.

She and Reel were married at Greenwich, Conn., September 16, 1926. She had obtained an interlocutory divorce decree here from Earl T. Montgomery April 20 of the same year.

At the time of her marriage both she and Reel thought her marital ties with Montgomery were severed, and not until 1935 did they learn the final decree was not entered until April 20, 1927.

Miss Reynolds declared Reel then promised to remarry her, but there never was another ceremony. The climax came, the complaint said, August 13, when Reel moved out of their Hollywood home.

Strikebreaker And Wife Jailed In Relief Fraud

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—Sam (Chowderhead) Cohen, who has been called to testify as a strikebreaker in numerous labor disputes, and his wife were given indeterminate penttentiary sentences today for defrauding the local emergency relief bureau of $700.

Although Mrs. Cohen's sentence was suspended, her husband faced a possible maximum of three years' imprisonment. The court was told Cohen and his wife, since December 14, 1932, had received $1,182.64 from the home relief bureau while he was employed almost continuously.

Poisoned Baby and Mother Will Live

Nurse Bertha Elliott, of Children's Hospital, holds the 17-day-old son of Mrs. Ethel Lawson, 23, who is seen in the inset. Mrs. Lawson yesterday morning fed poison to the baby and then to herself. In a note written to her husband, Leon Lawson, unemployed veteran, she said she was "too far gone to get myself back" and that she did not want to leave the baby to be a burden. Both will recover, hospital attendants declare.

Mother Is Glad Poison Spared Baby and Self

Disabled Veteran's Wife Sought to End Burden for Husband.

Mrs. Ethel Lawson and her 17-day-old baby boy were recovering last night from poison administered, police say, by the mother, who declared she was glad her efforts to commit suicide and murder failed.

Mrs. Lawson, 23-year-old wife of Leon Lawson, 35, unemployed and disabled veteran, told police she had planned to kill herself "for the best" and that she did not want to leave the baby behind as a burden to her husband. She is also the mother of a 3-year-old daughter.

Lawson, who was mustered out of the Marine service with rheumatic fever five years ago, has been unemployed for several months. He registered for work with the Public Employment Center, but his card is now in the inactive files because he has not been into the office since May, it was said.

Mrs. Lawson is at Gallinger Hospital, while the baby is at Children's Hospital. Both will live, doctors believe.

Foundry Unwilling To Reveal Salaries

By the Associated Press.

The Secruities Commission, which recently denied a request by the American Car & Foundry Co. that its top salaries for the fiscal year ended April 30, 1936, be kept confidential, received yesterday a plea that the company's salaries for the last fiscal year be held secret.

Another company, Simmons Hardware & Paint Co., of St. Louis, reported its president and general manager, L. E. Crandall, received $33,354 last year; H. A. Hoeynck, vice president, $9,599, and P. M. Mulliken, merchandise manager, $7,200.

Postal Telegraph & Cable Co. reported Clarence H. Mackay, president, received $30,360; A. H. Griswold, executive vice president, $27,800, and Robert A. Gannt, operating vice president, $22,640.

Imports of Canadian Shingles Are Limited

President Roosevelt ordered yesterday imports of Canadian red cedar shingles in the second half of this year be limited to 892,373 squares.

The order, announced at the White House, was in compliance with the 1936 revenue act. The act directs the President to limit such imports in each half-calendar year, while the trade agreement with Canada is in effect, to 25 per cent of the combined total of American producers' shipments and the imports during the preceding half-year.

Illness of Child Brings Armistice In Governors' Feud

Atlanta, Sept. 3 (AP).—A sick child brought a tacit armistice today in the warfare between Gov. E. D. Rivers and Gov. Charles F. Hurley, of Massachusetts, extradition feudists.

The Georgia executive wired to Hurley an expression of hope for the speedy recovery of Sally. Hurley responded: "Please accept my sincere thanks for your kind message and thoughtfulness."

Thus was shelved a fight which began July 27 when Gov. Hurley declined to extradite James Cunningham, Negro fugitive from a Georgia chain gang, with comment on "brutality" and long sentences. Rivers blamed a score of escapes on Hurley's "precedent of harboring Georgia criminals."

New chain gang breaks yesterday, which left six convicts free today, caused Rivers to order the "automatic dismissal" of any warden or guard involved in an escape.

Court Unhurt By Fight, Says Van Devanter

By the Associated Press.

Yellowstone Park, Wyo., Sept. 3.—Willis Van Devanter said today "the foundation underlying the Supreme Court has not been disturbed by the controversy over reorganization.

"The recent flurry will soon be forgotten," he said to the Montana and Wyoming Bar Associations.

"No doubt you'd be glad to have me say something about the Supreme Court, and I would be glad to say something about the Supreme Court, but not the merits of the phase in which you have been most interested recently," he said.

Tells of Rule Revision.

Justice Van Devanter said that when he became a member of the court cases were from 18 months to 2 years behind. He described how the court rules were revised—equity, bankruptcy, admiralty—to speed up the work.

"The last five years," he said, "the court has been up to date."

When the court adjourned for the summer, he said, there were two or three cases in which one of the judges could not sit, and since the vote had been 4 to 4, it was decided to restore them to the docket.

"Work on the Supreme Court is a grind," he said. "Eyes give out and they don't get the sleep they need.

"The work of the Supreme Court is thoughtfully done, carefully done; done as well as it could be done by the men who do it."

'Marvel at Understanding.'

"If you could sit through a court conference you would marvel at the understanding of the judges and their familiarity with the cases.

"The Supreme Court is the cornerstone and the foundation stone of our Government."

Frederick H. Stinchfield, of Minneapolis, president of the American Bar Association, earlier praised Senators Wheeler, of Montana, and O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, who opposed President Roosevelt's court-reform proposal.

Wheeler and O'Mahoney were guests. Stinchfield said 70 members of the Senate are lawyers, "yet they were nearly six months in concluding not to violate the ark of our covenant; six months in deciding not to destroy that institution which lawyers most revere."

South Censures Wallace's Curb On Crop Loans

'Will of Congress Defeated,' Opinion of Cotton Commissioners.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 3.—Southern agricultural commissioners criticized Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today for "defeating the will of Congress" in limiting cotton loans to 65 per cent of the base acreage.

They charged the announced program of a 9-cent loan and 3-cent subsidy payment violated an agreement between Congress and the President and deprived cotton growers of payments that would place them on a parity with producers of tariff-protected commodities.

Johnston to Defense.

Johnston, appearing in no official capacity, argued Wallace was bound to limit the payments.

J. C. Holton, Mississippi commissioner, said no mention was made of limitation during committee hearings in Washington. He said Southern agricultural leaders left the Capital with the understanding that the loan and parity payment would be made to all cotton growers on all their acreage, contingent upon co-operation in a control program next year.

Commissioners Harry Wilson, of Louisiana; Bob Goode, of Alabama, and J. E. McDonald, of Texas, supported Holton's view and McDonald added Secretary Wallace was making a "grave mistake." Lawrence Westbrook, advisor to the commissioners, said the 65 per cent base (arrived at by a study of previous yearly production), had been deliberately cut from the defeated Connally bill.

Action Binds Wallace.

No mention of a limitation was made in the adopted Brynes amendment, Westbrook said, holding that Wallace was bound by this action.

Johnson said the 65 per cent base was the only "fair and equitable" method of making payments, adding that payments on the entire 15,600,000 bale crop would require $234,000,000.

Mitchell to Study Race Relations

By the Associated Press.

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, of Chicago, only colored Congressman, announced yesterday he will leave September 14 on a tour of Southern and Southwestern States "to get a close-up view of what progress has been made toward goodwill between the white and colored races."

Mitchell likened his tour to President Roosevelt's "good neighbor trip" to South America.

"Much of the bitterness between the colored and white races has been washed away," Mitchell said. "The South, in order to prosper, must find a method for co-operation between the races."

'No-Pennies' Bandit Escapes With $18

An untidy young bandit who demanded "everything but your pennies" left Edwin Snowder, manager of a Little Tavern at 1326 New York avenue without a solitary nickel to telephone the police with when robbed of $18 yesterday.

"Pennies just won't work in a pay phone," Snowder lamented after he walked to give the alarm.

The American Red Cross yesterday authorized its 3,700 chapters to accept contributions for relief work among all nationalties in China.

The money will be sent to the Chinese Red Cross and other committees. The American group does not contemplate sending personnel to China.

A delegate from the international Red Cross committee now is investigating conditions in the war area. In view of needs known to be existing at various points, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman, authorized the acceptance of gifts pending the delegate's report.

D. C. Safety Unit To Guard Workers

The District government shortly will have a safety division designed to reduce accidents among workmen, chiefly on construction and street engineering jobs.

Edward J. Bunker, formerly with the United States engineer's office at Pittsburgh, was appointed assistant engineer in charge of safety inspection.

Struck by Motorcycle.

William Briggs, 51, of 661 C street southeast, was slightly injured early yesterday when he was struck by a motorcycle at Pennsylvania avenue and Eighth street northwest.

Gave His Blood Hoping for a Job; He's Still Waiting

Bernard Manyette, 36-year-old pipefitter and plumber's helper, who gave a blood transfusion to help save the life of a man at Providence Hospital about a month ago, yesterday was disappointed at the results of his act.

Manyette has been unemployed for three years and he believed that by providing the blood he would get publicity that in turn would bring him a job. He got the story, all right, and was pictured in the papers with his three children.

But no single offer of a job resulted.

Undertaker Wins 'Sightseeing' Case

Charges that Funeral Director W. W. Chambers violated a 40-year-old hackers' ordinance when he neglected to have funeral cars designated as "vehicles for hire" were dismissed yesterday by Assistant Corporation Counsel Glen Simmon. Simmon refused to issue papers in the case.

The cases of P. J. Saffell and W. F. Taylor, funeral directors, against whom similar charges are pending, will receive a like disposition, it was learned.

Simmon's ruling was that Chambers used the autos only as a part of his regular services and did not use them as "sightseeing" cars or rent them to other undertakers.

Scooter Injuries Fatal to Boy, 12

A 12-year-old colored boy died yesterday from injuries received when he fell from a scooter last June 15.

The boy, Levi Brown, of 1115 New Jersey avenue northwest, struck his head on the sidewalk when he fell. He did not receive treatment at the time. Later, however, he complained of a pain in his head and was taken to Freedman's Hospital, where he remained for two weeks.

A death certificate has been issued by Dr. J. B. Horner, the boy's physician.

Peace, Not A Sword.

The churches and church leaders of the Nation would be very ill-advised, indeed, to give any moral or material support to the suggestion of the Rev. Ralph E. Nollner that they line up behind the A. F. of L. in its struggle with the C. I. O.

This struggle, which has tended to divide the American labor movement into two increasingly hostile camps, is serious enough without having it made worse by the intervention of outsiders. Certainly the A. F. of L. would be harmed rather than helped by any support from sources whose motives might be suspect in the eyes of the workers.

There is a definite role in the labor movement for both of the competing organizations. John L. Lewis has made some serious mistakes and certain C. I. O. activities have seriously antagonized public opinion. Yet, at the same time, due credit must be given this movement for having performed a remarkable and much-needed work of organization in the mass-production industries.

It was a task for which the A. F. of L. was not particularly suited and which it, therefore, failed to accomplish. On the other hand, there are many industries in which the interests of the workers can best be served by craft unions of the A. F. of L. type. Only trouble can result from C. I. O. efforts to capture these.

In the long run, both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. will gain nothing and lose much by continuing the present struggle. And, by the same token, both organizations and the country generally would benefit by a truce to their present conflict. When William Green is extending an olive branch to his rival it would be a most undesirable moment for any clergyman, in particular, to stir animosity further.

Whether Mr. Green's peace gesture will have constructive results remains to be seen. But it is certainly clear that such efforts to bridge the widening gap between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. deserve the full approval of those religious leaders who are conscious of their social opportunities and their national responsibility.

Airport Merry-Go-Round.

It is unfortunate that the President didn't speak his mind sooner on the Washington airport problem. With earlier indication of his attitude, the last session of Congress, which seemed in a mood to settle the ten-year-old issue, might have worked out a practical solution.

This the Copeland-May bill was not. It was devised as a compromise and passed in the last-minute rush. The President's points in vetoing it were entirely reasonable. To begin with, the Federal Government should own and control the airport serving the Capital. As aviation grows, an increasing number of planes on official national and international business will be arriving here. They may well be sufficiently numerous to rival ordinary commercial traffic. Moreover, the field here will have an important military significance.

As for the proposal to lease 53 acres of the Government experimental farm for $1 a year, the President properly squashed this. It would have been tantamount to giving away valuable Federal property. Without question, there is no good reason why the farm should be allowed to block aviation development. But to hand it over to private interests without making provision for its transfer elsewhere would have been curious reward for the valuable work of the experimental station.

But that is all water under the bridge. The real point is that the Capital is now virtually back where it was in 1927, when the need for a new airport first became evident. There has been some slight progress made of late. The list of alternatives is reduced. Camp Springs may now be out of the question, because the options on it will have expired before Congress reconvenes. And the Washington-Hoover field has been eliminated by the President as the principal permanent airport.

All signs therefore point to Gravelly Point. The President favors the site; the planning commission favors it. This completes the circuit of the merry-go-round. For five years ago the Gibson bill was urging just this solution of the problem. Its advantages still hold: A Gravelly Point field would be large and at the same time convenient to the city; it is Government owned; it offers accommodations to seaplanes, which may be a not inconsiderable asset.

Its disadvantages also still hold. It will take time and money to complete it. But Washington has already waited ten years—it can wait another one or two. As for the money, any safe airport anywhere will cost a goodly sum. The site invites fog and flood hazards, it is also pointed out. The President offers the solution for this. Give Washington an auxiliary airport for emergencies, he says. That would sound better if the last decade had shown any progress on the major problem.

The Failure Of Education.

H. G. Wells is not alone in being very dubious as to the value of contemporary education. Every parent who has concern for the future of his children must sometimes doubt whether their current intellectual training will prove really valuable in the confused future which lies ahead. Every conscientious teacher must periodically confront the bitter thought that he may be wasting both his and his pupils' time. Every truly patriotic citizen must occasionally wonder if the instruction of the coming generation is fitting it to solve the problems which successful democracy must continuously confront.

These doubts are the more perplexing because so completely unanswerable. There can be general agreement with Mr. Wells' verdict, delivered to the British Association for the Advancement of Science, that "what is called elementary education throughout the world does not, in fact, educate because it does not properly inform." There is also little to quarrel with in the old definition of education as "the adaptation of the human animal to his environment," using environment in the broad sense of intellectual and spiritual as well as material surroundings. The old definition and the new condemnation fit. Children today are not being informed regarding the environment which they may in future have to confront.

This fact, however, is inconclusive. Except in static, relatively changeless periods, children have never been trained for the future. When the future is unpredictable such training is all but impossible. And even if it were possible to instruct prophetically the desirability of so doing would be highly questionable. School children of Germany, Japan and Italy today learn drilling, the manipulation of gas masks, the art of taking cover in air raids. Such instruction may be a perfect example of "the adaptation of the human animal to his environment," so far as those countries are concerned. But to call it education is close to blasphemy.

Mr. Wells, and not for the first time, shows himself more skillful in diagnosis than in prescription. He is right in saying that "the uninstructed public intelligence of the community is feeble and convulsive." He is justified in his criticism of the schools—not merely in England—for "delivering year by year fresh hordes of ignorant, unbalanced and uncritical minds, at once suspicious and credulous, weakly gregarious, easily baffled and easily misled." It is a strong indictment, but it is true.

Yet what to do about it is not so easily stated. Mr. Wells himself becomes a little vague and wordy here. He seems to favor a simplification of instruction, on the one hand a concentration on the fundamentals of science; on the other, a stimulus to imaginative play. These are two sure guides. But when he also proposes "a detailed study of such phenomena as the rise and fall of the Ottoman Empire" one feels a measure of contradiction.

Like many sincere, thoughtful and worried men and women, H. G. Wells is fumbling toward a solution of the most pressing problem of our age—a form of education which will help man to control rather than further to complicate his destiny. The encouraging feature in the situation is that so many are aware of the need, and, in their various ways, in various spheres, are groping for the answer.

In this quest the teacher alone cannot do much; nor can the parent, nor the citizen. It will require the united efforts of a whole society to secure that adaptation of education to a changing world which contemporary civilization so clearly needs.

But when the effort is made it is probable that the line of solution will not be found in a further cluttering of the curriculum. It is more likely to be in the direction of simplification than complication. It will very likely look backward rather than ahead, demanding that "recovery of the great liberal tradition" toward which the new administration at St. John's College, to name one instance near at hand, has set its face.

The Olympic Theme.

Dorpveld, Schliemann and a host of other archeologists are largely responsible for the world's picture of Greek civilization. Museums everywhere hold the fruits of their excavations. But it remained for a French baron to recapture a facet of the glory of Greece less tangible, perhaps, than marbles and frescoes but no less important. His name was Pierre de Coubertin. He it was who revived the Olympic games after a lapse of 15 centuries.

He has just died at Geneva, which was appropriate since Geneva best symbolizes today's poor efforts toward the international good will and friendly intercourse for which he strove. An educator, he began his campaign for revival of the games among French schools. At first he met with little success, but by 1894 he had stimulated widespread discussion of his plans. Two years later the first modern games were held at Athens. Though unpretentious compared to recent contests, the world responded to them, thrilled when a Greek runner won the marathon.

The next games are scheduled for Tokyo. Perhaps Japan will be under different, less brutal, leadership when the time for them comes. It will have to be if the Olympics are to continue. For though the games began as Peleponessian military displays, they soon lost all that flavor. Sportsmanship and chivalry became their theme, and on this basis the world revived them. Better sportsmanship and chivalry than that demonstrated currently by the Japanese in China will be needed if they expect any American guests in 1940.

Piracy In The Mediterranean.

The torpedo attack, fortunately unsuccessful, on the British destroyer, Havock, by a submarine of undetermined nationality and the sinking, by an equally mysterious underseas assailant, of a British tanker have stirred the British government out of its seeming lethargy.

Since the Spanish civil war broke out, 14 months ago, merchant vessels have found the going in the Mediterranean increasingly hazardous. During the past month alone there were no fewer than 18 piratical attacks on neutral ships. But only now, with public opinion and governmental circles in Great Britain, France, Russia and other nations interested in the Mediterranean aroused to fury by such intolerable outrages, is constructive action to meet the threat in prospect.

Some days ago France proposed that as a measure of defense the Mediterranean powers agree to pool their efforts to protect their shipping in that sea. Warships of nations belonging to this entente are, if the French plan goes into force, to come to the aid of any attacked merchantmen of any other nation.

To this plan the London government was at first skeptical, although it met with a considerable measure of support from Russia, Greece, Turkey and Egypt. But in consequence of the attack on the Havock and the sinking of the Woodford Great Britain has had a change of heart. Whether it will approve the French proposal in its present form is not yet clear. But it has agreed to participate in a conference at Geneva, with all other nations with shipping interests in the Mediterranean, to make that vital artery safe for commerce.

This British about-face is of more than immediate significance. It constitutes a realization on Britain's part that the menace of piracy in the Mediterranean cannot adequately be met by the action of one nation alone. To be sure, the London government has considerably increased its naval force in Spanish waters and instructions have been given to British naval commanders to track down and destroy offending submarines guilty of attacks on merchant ships or men of war. But this may not be enough.

What is in prospect, therefore, is a return by Great Britain to the practice of collective action. Limited, for the moment, only to the protection of shipping in the Mediterranean, it may be extended to other fields where the alternative to international co-operation is lawlessness and chaos.

This is a natural and a welcome trend. What is happening in the Mediterranean is all of a piece with what is happening at Shanghai. Piratical attacks, by submarines and airplanes, will continue until the peaceful, law-abiding nations decide that the practice is intolerable. When they combine to preserve the elements of civilization the piracy will be stopped. Without such resistance it promises to grow steadily more brazen.

Not Such A Dumb Dummy.

Love's young dream has been shattered by various and sundry causes. Rivals, cross words, broken engagements are a few of the better known forms assumed by that old snake in the grass. But it took Hollywood to introduce a really new angle to the much overworked and infernal triangle. The villain in this unique case is a wooden dummy.

This is not as funny as it seems, if the tears of Miss Judy Canova, young actress, are to be taken seriously. Her fiance, who is Edgar Bergen, the ventriloquist, was getting more and more wrapt up in his work. And his work was a wisecracking, unfeeling product of South American mangrove roots by the name of "Charlie McCarthy." Every time Judy looked at Edgar he was bouncing Charlie on his lap and whispering into his ear. Edgar even saw to it that his friend broke into the movies. Like Mary's little lamb, it soon got so that everywhere that Edgar went this "ham" was sure to go. So Judy gave her Punch the gate.

Maybe it's just as well that this engagement was broken. Miss Canova could not be expected to share a place on her husband's lap. And Mr. Bergen will never have to stand for any back talk now. Unless, of course, he takes the words out of his own mouth.

Upon reading that music will cause cows to give more milk, a farmer picked up his banjo and sashayed down to the barn strumming "She'll Be Coming Around the Mountain When She Comes." His usually docile cow went berserk, knocked him down and gored him and trampled his banjo. This cow is the first musical critic we've heard from whose opinion of hill-billy music coincides with ours.

The old gag about the foreman of a tied-up jury ordering 11 sandwiches and a bale of hay has hit the Broadway columns, and will probably make the air lanes by 1940.

Coalition Nominees.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reply to Mr. Dawson's letter of August 26, may I suggest that he immediately begin to work toward the founding of a coalition Democratic-Republican party and that he persuade it to nominate him for President and Jay Franklin for Vice President. By the way, I'm afraid that Franklin beat him—by a few laps—in making an equally brilliant suggestion regarding the most favorable candidates for positions named in Mr. Dawson's letter.

The ticket suggested by me will make a Cabinet superfluous. And that should be a help! Two minds but with a single thought would work better than a dozen with variable thoughts. That's what we are being told anyway—politically speaking. E. T. P.

New Deal Indictment?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Senator Guffey is right. The American people want men that keep their election promises."—John Riggles in The Post of August 30.

Mr. Riggles is right. From any New Deal advocate, recognition of such primary truths is always refreshing. But aren't his words a rather severe indictment of the New Deal and its titular head, whose chief asset is the unanimity with which they seize upon previous Administrations as goats on which to hang their own manifold failures and broken promises.

Committee On Traffic?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The traffic situation within District borders continues to resemble a civil war. A record toll of slaughtered, both visible and actual, is assured for the year, according to latest figures. Maryland's record is equally sanguinary. Organization by Congress of a committee on traffic seems long past due, to apply remedies for an acute problem on a national scale. All efforts to date have been too thin, diffused. Successful plans in the less afflicted communities should be extended to sore spots like Washington.

Already manufacturers look forward to three cars where two now exist; speed is now as always—injured innocence of car makers to the contrary—No. 1 selling point with "How fast will she go?" still the query of paramount importance. The toll of the daily civil war under this double setup becomes appalling. The exhaustion of cheap oil, while much closer than the "let tomorrow take care of itself gang" is willing to admit, is still too far distant to provide a remedy by leaving solution of the traffic problem to natural means.

A Peace Conference?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Nover's article in The Post of August 31 has a most happy ending. It says " . . . the only way we can avoid war and the consequences of war is to take constructive action for peace together with all the other nations prepared to join us . . ."

At this point the District of Columbia branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom is in entire accord with Mr. Nover. It views with enthusiasm the preparation of Secretary of State Hull for just such an emergency. The 53 nations which have signified their willingness to co-operate with the United States on the general principles laid down in Mr. Hull's communication of July 16 would surely be prepared to attend an economic conference convened immediately to consider the underlying causes of the conflict in China and the means of removing those causes.

The calling of such a conference and the acceptance of these friendly countries could well form a basis for a request on the part of these governments to China and Japan to cease hostilities until the findings of that conference be communicated to them. That they should be invited to that conference goes without saying. Whether or not either or both find themselves able to accept, the conference should go forward.

Much will depend upon the membership of that conference. In the call we believe that certain recommendations should be made. Most conferences of this nature have failed because only those people attend whose interests are centered in international law, trade, markets, finance, etc., and whose belief in the efficacy of violence to gain any end unachieved by diplomacy is quite fanatical.

We appeal for a conference, the membership of which shall include, in addition to those representing the financial and economic interests, those whose stake in peace is infinitely greater. Women should sit in that conference, the producers and nurturers of that life which force destroys. Labor, that class in the community who furnish the largest number of victims in any war, and philosophical and social and religious leaders, who have demonstrated not only that they have attained a grasp of world affairs, as distinguished from the advantages of any one group, and have proven their sincerity by accepting the consequences of their stand. Gandhi should sit in that conference. So should Maude Royden, A. J. Muste, Frank Murphy, Howard Keppley, Kagawa and Lansbury.

For this conference the stage is set. Let us not make its deliberations harder by delay.

MRS. ROBERT E. SHER,

Comment On The Far East Scene.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Being a Chinese-American, it does not surprise me that my American friends often ask me to explain the present tragic events in China, created by the imperialistic appetites of the Japanese warlords. Since the Nanking government signed a nonaggression pact with Soviet Russia, my American friends have been asking me to give the reasons for this latest development, which helped to make the future look brighter for China. Will you permit me to relate the little I know about the background of the strengthening of friendship between China and Soviet Russia?

Dr. Sun Yat Sen (1865-1925), who is looked upon as the Chinese George Washington, is still guiding, in a spiritual way, the political and sociological thinking of modern China. It was a firm belief of Dr. Sun Yat Sen that China can achieve her national liberation and modernization only with the friendly help of the Soviet Union. Even history seems to prove the correctness of Dr. Sun's conviction. For is it not a known fact that only when the Kuomintang broke its relations with Soviet Russia, after the death of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, did Japan dare to start her series of attacks upon China?

Now that China has become more united, the last instructions of Dr. Sun are again given attention. You may be interested to know what Dr. Sun wrote to the Soviet government when he was lying on his deathbed in Peiping in 1925. These were the last words of Dr. Sun:

"In bidding you farewell, dear comrades, I express the hope that the day is near when the U. S. S. R. will welcome mighty and free China as a friend and ally, and that in the great struggles for the liberation of the oppressed peoples of the world both allies will march side by side to victory."

A CHINESE-AMERICAN

Washington, Sept. 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Yakichiro Suma, counselor of the Japanese Embassy, laughs at the Chinese for protesting against the fiendish butchery of women and children by the Japanese.

"All Japan wants of China," he is reported as saying, "is co-operation." How should the Chinese co-operate? Should they try to make it easier and pleasanter for the Japanese to continue their butchery? Cannibals kill only under the imperious urge of hunger. The Japanese kill without reason or provocation but for the sheer joy of killing. They proudly publish photographs showing Japanese children shouting banzai at the news about the mangled bodies of Shanghai's citizens. Yet we call the cannibals savages and the Japanese "civilized."

Perhaps Mr. Suma can give us a tip on the date when the Japanese expect to demand their peculiar kind of "co-operation" from the United States. E. V. WILCOX.

Chevy Chase, Md., Sept. 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with a mixture of laughter and indignation the Japanese counselor's joking reaction to Dr. C. T. Wang's timely speech at the benefit dinner last Monday evening. Suma's statements in The Post of September 1 are, I am sure, an insult to the intelligence of millions of well-informed peoples throughout the world.

Let me briefly comment on the three vital points so preposterously and shamelessly brought out by the counselor of the Japanese Embassy.

First, the counselor intimated that the Japanese Embassy does not contemplate issuing a formal rebuttal to the Chinese Ambassador's war speech. What nonsense! What rebuttal can Suma's embassy offer? We are not blind and deaf to the undeniable facts of the Japanese acts of "barbarism" in the present undeclared Sino-Japanese conflict. The whole world knows perfectly well that Japan has been the aggressor and China the victim.

Secondly, Suma stated that "enmity" for the Chinese people is an alien thing to the mind of the Japanese. If that were true, how could he account for the wholesale atrocious Japanese aerial and and naval bombings and machine-gunning of the homes and lives of the innocent, defenseless Chinese civilians and noncombatants in the Tientsin and Shanghai areas?

Thirdly, Suma maintained that all Japan wants of China is "co-operation." Obviously, by co-operation the Japanese Fascists and imperialists mean just this: conquest of the whole of China and subsequent subjugation and enslavement of the 450,000,000 Chinese people. The successive aggressive actions of the Japanese militarists during the last six years have clearly defined their version of the word "co-operation."

To the mind of the Chinese co-operation between China and Japan is possible only on the basis of liberty, equality and justice. Only on such basis can the two countries ever hope to solve their political and economic differences. Suma can rest assured that China will fight and sacrifice to the last man in order to gain her national freedom and independence.

Britain To Tokyo.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The British letter to Tokyo was long in words but lacking logic.

For reasons which may be surmised but not mentioned England abandoned her secure ground of injured sovereignty through her wounded diplomat, to crusade in the untenable field as a champion of noncombatants. She speaks for too many clients whose conduct she cannot control. Thousands of noncombatants never lifted a deadly weapon yet are daily giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

Indeed, England hurries to admit that "noncombatants must accept the inevitable risk of injury resulting from the normal conduct of hostilities." She demands a formal apology for the injury not of her Ambassador, but of a noncombatant, punishment of those who inflicted the injury and finally, assurance that Japan will carry on its future military activities in a manner agreeable to England.

Future Waterloos may be won for England by her boys from Harrow and Eton, but she will add little to her diplomatic reputation by such schoolboy letters as that just sent to Tokyo.

ALBERT DAN ROSS.

Washington, Aug. 31.

The Post Impressionist

Emile Zola.

IT WAS hot and sultry in the National so I couldn't understand why M. Zola should complain continually about draughts. I had forgotten for the moment that he was a hypochondriac. So wise in the ways of the heart; so childish in the ways of the body. Ah, well, one could overlook that weakness in the sheer joy of meeting him, enjoying his gaiety, trembling before his ire. I had not remembered that he was so light-hearted, so irrepressible. But, then, of course, his fame and fortune had been made many years before I met him in the Encyclopedia Britannica.

It was a treat to know the young Zola. He was so far removed from history's dust-covered legend. He was always impetuous. Perhaps it was his mixed Italian and Greek blood. Mayhap it was the French joie de vivre which he inherited from his mother. He did wild things—he and his friend Cezanne. They made little jokes of their poverty. It is even said that they warmed their fingertips at fires made from trashy novels. Ah, it was a grand life. Hungry? Often! Cold? But yes! Unhappy? Not too much! Troubled? Just enough!

They lived, these two idealistic young Frenchmen, in an attic that must have discouraged even the rats which frequented it. I have seen that attic. As I remember, the snow and the rain alike beat in on the two temperamental tenants. Cezanne would shrug his shoulders and pull the old blanket wrap closer around his shoulders. M. Zola was not so philosophical. He lived in mortal terror of pneumonia and it was a fear which rode him all his life. He could brave the scorn of the rabble; enjoy skirmishes with the censors; fight to the last ditch with the government itself. But a sneeze . . . Ah, Monsieur, a sneeze is the devil in disguise.

It was a relief to all of us when Zola married the practical Alexandrine. By hook or crook, she had managed to secure him a clerkship in the publishing house of Hachette & Co. I can see him now—transformed from the attic habitue into a respected citizen of France. Did I say respected? Well, hardly that. You see he had within his heart a fire which smoldered day and night. It was not a comfortable fire of the hearth variety but a consuming blaze that licked at the very superstructure of a country. And when men looked upon it, they became afraid and spoke of Zola in undertones.

The butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker lost patience with M. and Mme. Zola because they couldn't pay their bills. Any one of us would have been glad to lend a little but I don't suppose it ever occurred to him to ask us. As far as he was concerned, we were nothing more than spectators watching his life unreel before us.

There was no Great Day in M. Zola's life. The foundation upon which he builded went up so slowly, crusade upon crusade, success upon success, that it was hard to lay a finger upon the moment when his fortune seemed to turn for the better. The house of his life was a magnificent thing. It embodied kindliness, courage and love. Its doors were open to those in distress; its windows revealed vistas undreamed by mere mortal. And we who had come to know the man better were glad. And proud.

* * *

Then L'Affaire Dreyfus came knocking at the door of M. Zola. Just when he was beginning to poke up the blaze of his success and relax before its warmth. He turned the key against this unwelcome intruder; he pulled down the shades of his conscience so that he might not look out and behold what was happening. But not for long. Zola, the fighter; Zola, the attic rebel; Zola, the author of acid, left the calm comfort of his declining years and walked out into the cold blasts of public abuse.

"J'accuse" he wrote and a nation rocked on its foundation. "J'accuse" he stormed and a rotten army system was wiped out. "J'accuse" and an innocent man was restored to his place in the community. "J'accuse" the city, the nation, the world. Ah, it was magnificent, M. Zola, and what a gesture to make for a man whom you had never seen—were destined never to see.

The trial was a mockery, but it was redolent of those times. A mockery also was the miscasting of young Clemenceau, being all too redolent of those times. This flaw stood out strongly as I sat and heard your lawyer's courageous defense and his gallant efforts to make sense where there was none. I shall not soon forget your own superb plea for justice. I was near enough to you, M. Zola, to put out my hand and touch the roughness of your coat. But it was as if you had turned me into stone by the artistry of your eloquence. I scarcely dared breathe and everyone else within sound of your voice wore a similarly strained look.

* * *

It was hard for us, who had followed your fortunes and your misfortunes since the old Cezanne days, to realize that you were really dead. You who had been living and breathing, but a few moments before. Your colleague's eulogy heightened the impression that you were still living, would always live. That was the thought which I cherished as I left the scene of your resting place.

"That was a wonderful picture, wasn't it?" my companion asked me.

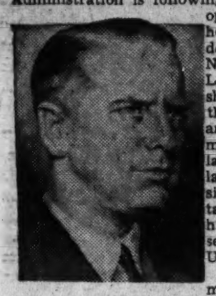
Senator Ellender's Views.

SENATOR ELLENDER, of Louisiana, one of Mr. Roosevelt's progressive statesmen of the New South, declared that he is now convinced that the Roosevelt Administration is following the methods and philosophy of Huey Long and that he would like the President do the same things for the Nation that Huey did for Louisiana. Senator Ellender should be an authority as to the similarity of methods and philosophy. As head man of Huey's mock Legislature he put through the laws which made Huey the single-handed military dictator of Louisiana, and he has now completed his first session as a New Deal United States Senator.



He has had a chance to make comparisons in consequence of which he now finds himself devoted to a leader whom he opposed until Huey was killed and the New Deal bought up the political properties of Long's organization.

The progressive statesman of the New South does not speak for President Roosevelt, who may wish to disown certain of the methods and philosophy of Huey Long and any desire to do for or to the Nation all that Huey did in Louisiana. However, the Senator is now an eminent New Dealer, and there is no doubt that some of Mr. Roosevelt's operations remind him of the Kingfish.

• • • •

HUEY INSISTED that his legislators, of whom he said that they could be bought and sold like sacks of potatoes, must do as he ordered or take the consequences, and Senator Ellender has heard a homelike note from the Administration in this respect during his brief time in Washington. Huey also packed the Louisiana courts as a preliminary to the creation of his power, and he used the tax authority as a bludgeon on his political opponents.

Without holding Mr. Roosevelt responsible for Senator Ellender's proclamation, let us see what the Senator would like Mr. Roosevelt do for the Nation that Huey did for Louisiana.

Huey packed not only the courts of Louisiana but the legal profession as well, by a law empowering his attorney general, to admit or kick out members at will. No attorney could take a case against any member of Huey's organization without the risk of being disbarred. Senator Ellender would extend the same power to the Federal Attorney General.

Huey passed a law providing for a debt moratorium, but conferred on his own State bank examiner the right to grant or deny debt relief according to the political devotion of the applicant. The progressive statesman of the New South favors a similar national law similarly administered.

Huey empowered his board of tax assessors to raise, reduce or entirely remit taxes according to the applicant's politics and virtually deny the right to appeal—another item which would become national if the New Dealer had his way.

• • • •

HUEY ENLARGED the jurisdiction of his civil service commission to take in not only State employes but sheriffs and deputies, policemen, firemen, teachers and every kind of local employe, all of whom thus became members of his political organization, paying a percentage of their wages for their jobs. According to Senator Ellender's wish, Mr. Roosevelt should have a similar power over more than 3,000,000 public employes throughout the country—State, county and local.

Huey handed over to the Governor the authority to appoint and remove every sweeper, bottle holder, bailiff and flunky serving in any of the State or inferior courts and the local commissions and boards. Senator Ellender would place in the hands of the President or the Postmaster General every public job in the United States, however menial, in compliance with Huey's methods and philosophy.

Huey enlarged his secret police to unknown and unlimited size, with the mission of spying on his political opponents and with authority to supersede the local police in all cases.

Huey made a law permitting him to buy sufficient votes at $5 each to elect his ticket in any doubtful precinct and charge the expense to those who voted against him.

Huey concentrated all the power of the government, the Legislature, the courts, the public service, down to the street sweepers, in one man. He abolished all local government. He boasted of using his tax authority to ruin his enemies, and the progressive statesman of the New South believes the President has all this in mind for the whole Nation, and would help bring it about.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Plea for Punchless Golf.

There is a movement afoot for the return of the old-time golf ball. If you got 150 yards with it you were a socker extraordinary. With the modern golf ball making the 250 and 270 yard flight quite common, golf has become largely a matter of brawn.

• • • •

Max Behr, runner-up to Jerry Travers at Garden City in 1908, has drawn up a petition to the U. S. G. A., urging that the ball be changed so that skill will count rather than wallop.

• • • •

The Scots meant golf to be a game primarily of skill and finesse. When a man broke par he was demonstrating something more important than the fact he was young and healthy.

• • • •

The modern golf ball will go so far when properly socked that a par three can become a hole in one.

• • • •

A drive generally winds up so near the green that the rest of the hole is just a wrist motion. It is like playing cards with nothing but aces.

• • • •

Mr. Behr wants the game put back to a point where a fellow could still win a cup and not have a bicep to his name.

• • • •

He thinks there should be more trophies in the home of the golfer who has no hair on his chest.

• • • •

Mr. Behr feels this coulid all be done by restoring the "floater" golf ball. This was a ball that was so light it would float in water. It originated with the Scots. They were no men to give up a ball just because it had landed in the lake.

• • • •

The root of all evil in modern golf is the long-distance ball, thinks Mr. Behr. Everybody is out for distance. They are five and ten golfers. (Five seconds to drive off and ten minutes to find the ball.)

• • • •

"I got a drive of 300 yards on that last hole," a golfer boasts.

"How many strokes did you take after that?" you ask him.

"Why bring that up? It's unimportant" is the answer.

• • • •

The socking influence has invaded every department of the game. Only yesterday at Racebrook, where they are using sand greens this season, we heard Elmer Twitchell, after going 10 feet beyond the cup on his fifth putt, complain, "I'm not getting distance this year."

World's Oil, Water

British Observer Suggests Basic Incompatibility Of Democracies And Dictatorships; Urges Former Make Selves Strong.

By Commander Stephen King-Hall.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

MR. EBBUTT, the brilliant and fair-minded Berlin correspondent of the London Times, has been expelled from Germany. Why? Because he told the truth about the Nazi regime in that country. That is not, indeed, the reason given by the Nazi government. Dr. Goebbels says that Mr. Ebbutt has been expelled as a reprisal for the expulsion from Great Britain of three German newspapermen. These gentlemen have been asked to leave not because of anything they have written or said in their capacity as journalists, but because of their activities as members of the organization which "controls" Germans living in foreign countries.

This episode is an example of that fundamental difference of outlook between dictatorships and democracies which now divides Western civilization. It is a question which demands our continued and earnest attention, and was expressed by Lord Hardinge a few weeks ago when he argued that the problem today is to make the coexistence of democracies and dictatorships safe for the world.

This is, of course, a much oversimplified statement of a very complicated question, but it will do as a signpost showing the direction in which we should think.

Great Powers Today Divide In Two Groups.

IN THE WORLD of today the great powers can be divided into two groups. In one of these we find the democratic faith, with all that it implies—such as tolerance, freedom of speech, association and press—accepted as the right way of life. In the other group the doctrine of the totalitarian state, with its insistence on the obliteration of the individual, its persecution of racial and political minorities, its exaltation of war, is held to be the proper method of social organization.

These great differences are found between governments; they do not belong to individuals. In Great Britain, Germany, France and Italy there are—as I write these words—millions of men and women concerned with the same kind of personal problem. "Will it be fine tomorrow? How shall I pay these household bills? Can I afford a new hat? Should I sack that clerk? Does she love me? Where shall we go for the holidays? Why doesn't baby put on weight? How can I make more money? I've laddered two pairs of stockings! How old I'm looking tonight! Shall I get that job? etc., etc., etc.

These and a myriad questions like them are the threads which, woven together, make the pattern of our life, and their existence is the irrefutable evidence of our common humanity.

But as soon as we blur the individual into the mass of the nation, democracy faces dictatorship across a great gulf.

It would seem likely that one day the sovereign state will disappear as a political unit though the nation will remain as a cultural and social group, but neither I who write nor you who read this article will live to see that day. The sovereign state, which began to take shape as a result of the Reformation, is probably about two-thirds of the way along the path of its evolution. This would make the date of its decline and fall about 2100 A. D., allowing for that increase in the rate of change which is a matter we must never lose sight of when considering the future in the fading light of the past.

Relations Harmonious In Hands Of Individuals.

WHAT OF the present? One knows from practical experience that commercial and social relations of a harmonious character can be maintained between citizens of democratic and dictatorship countries when the intercourse is as between individuals.

An Englishman, a German, a Frenchman and an Italian can dine together, stay in the same house, do business and play games together in a tolerably peaceful manner because in these personal relations something is present which is lacking in the governmental relations between the dictatorships and the democracies, and that something is the practice of democracy. In the private relationship there is a common code of behavior, a readiness to give and take, a willingness to discuss.

But when a Fascist or Nazi government has to act in its corporate capacity it has to be uncompromising, infallible, aggressive and supremely nationalistic. Its domestic position has forever to be justified by its achievements in a crisis; and if there isn't a crisis readily available, one must be manufactured.

Now the essence of peaceful international relations is the existence of a will to co-operate, and co-operation is impossible unless there is some measure of agreement on basic principles and a certain degree of mutual trust. You can't have a game of football if one team is composed of all-in wrestlers playing their rules.

There is not, never has been and never will be any such agreement between the dictatorships and the democracies. On the day such agreement is reached either we shall have ceased to be democracies or they will have knocked at the doors of the temple of our faith. It cannot be said too often or too emphatically that if either Germany or Italy genuinely and wholeheartedly co-operated with Great Britain and France and the other democracies through some form of League of Nations—and there must be some kind of international organization through which co-operation between governments can be expressed—then Germany and Italy could no longer claim to be practicing the doctrines of the totalitarian state.

Genuine Co-operation Means Difficult Sacrifice.

AN ATHEIST can hardly join a religious community and continue to disbelieve in the existence of God. A Communist—if he is logical (the place to find the ones who aren't is France) can only seek a seat in Parliament in order the better to destroy it.

Genuine co-operation between the dictatorships and the democracies can therefore only be obtained at the cost of a sacrifice which neither side is at present willing to make and which, so far as I am concerned, I cannot imagine I should ever be willing to make.

The world can only be made safe in the co-existence of democracy and dictatorships by the two groups having as little to do with each other as possible. We—that is to say the democracies—have not the slightest desire to interfere in the internal affairs of the Nazis and Fascists. As regards foreign policy our crime is that we want them to sit down round a table with us and organize international peace and it's a crime because it is in effect a standing invitation to Hitler and Mussolini to practice democratic methods which they have repeatedly abused and condemned in the most violent terms.

So much for one side of the question. What about the other people? Are they prepared to leave us alone? I leave aside the question of Nazi and Fascist intrigues in the domestic affairs of democracies in order to consider their foreign policies. Can it be denied that such policies have been consistently aggressive and militaristic, and can a totalitarian state have any other kind of foreign policy? Furthermore, can such policies, whether carried out by Germany, Italy, Russia or Japan, be other than menacing to the conception of international peace believed in by British and Americans?

There is only one way of insuring that we shall be left alone to develop our part of the world along democratic lines and that is to make ourselves so strong that it becomes too dangerous to monkey about with us

In the meanwhile let us cultivate cordial personal relations with Germans and Italians, let us encourage them to come and see how Great Britain lives (if their governments will allow them to travel); but as regards intergovernmental negotiations, a strictly correct and not too enthusiastic attitude should be maintained. We have put our cards on the table, let the dictatorships come and play their hand. They will come in time and the less eager we seem the sooner that day will dawn.

Hull Is 'Doing Best' To Save U. S. Flier

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull yesterday telegraphed Mrs. Ida Dahl, Champaign, Ill., that the State Department was using its "best efforts" to induce Spanish insurgents not to execute her son, Harold E. Dahl, captured loyalist aviator. He said he could do no more.

Department officials said they had no confirmation of reports that Dahl was sentenced to death.

Anything Goes

By Barnet Nover

Sauce For The Gander.

THE DEPTH BOMBS dropped by the British destroyer, Havock, after it had been subjected to a mysterious torpedo attack, may and may not have had the intended effect. The offending submarine may, this time, have escaped destruction. This is not important. What is important is that Great Britain by this action has made it clear that it plans to fight fire with fire.

The example set by the British is certain to be followed by others. Ships of half a dozen nationalities have, to an increasing degree, been subjected to acts of piracy in the Mediterranean ever since the Spanish civil war began. Unless stopped, these continued depredations on merchant vessels and warships could make international commerce in that important artery an impossibility.

The cue has now been given. There is now to be an open season for the mysterious prowlers of the Mediterranean. And the nation or nations responsible for their intolerable activities will hardly be in any position to protest if these piratical craft are sent to the bottom of the sea.

• • • •

IT IS A well-known axiom of war that no new weapon long remains unchallenged. The use of poison gas resulted in the development of the gas mask; the bombing plane led to the perfecting of antiaircraft guns; the tank has met its match in projectiles capable of piercing the heaviest armor of the land battleships.

An offensive weapon of a wholly new type or power, therefore, can enjoy but a temporary advantage. Sooner or later a counter-weapon is developed.

To be sure a temporary advantage may be enough to make possible the winning of a battle or even a war. The Chinese, who invented gunpowder, were so backward in war-making, at the time the West began to pound at their gates, that they succumbed easily to the pressure of those equipped with modern devices in death-dealing. And military experts say that had the Germans pressed the temporary advantage they gained when they launched the first poison gas attack or had the British similarly made use of the golden opportunity placed in their hands by the inventor of the tank, the effects might have been far different from what they were.

• • • •

NEITHER THE GERMANS nor the British were sure of their new weapons. Instead of employing them on a large scale they only tried them out experimently and waited to see what its effects would be. And before very long the bewilderment of the enemy was followed by the perfection of means of defense and simultaneously by the use of the same weapon against those responsible for its introduction.

In international affairs, during the past few years, the advantage has been almost wholly with the nations that have chosen to violate the rules of the game.

Treaty observance, the respect for the sovereignty and independence of others, distinctions between combatants and noncombatants, the practice of declaring war before engaging in hostilities—these rules had been laid down for the common welfare. And because it is to the general interest to observe them they have, over a period of many years, been generally observed.

To a very much greater extent than one might imagine in view of what has been happening in Spain, Ethiopia and the Far East, the amenities are still being observed between nations.

• • • •

IT IS THIS VERY circumstance, in fact, that has played into the hands of the aggressors. While the rest of the world has been bound by the rules and thus has operated under recognized restraints, the aggressors have flouted these rules. The advantage to them has been considerable.

But now it appears as if their lawlessness is about to produce a counter-offensive. The action of the Havock is a portent. It suggests that, as the New York Herald Tribune so aptly point out, "localized 'guerrilla' defense in specific instances against the localized 'guerrilla' attacks, of limited warfare or 'armed neutralities' on one side against the limited aggressions on the other."

• • • •

INTERNATIONAL anarchy is the order of the day. It has been produced by two complementary sets of circumstances. One is the lawlessness of an aggressive group of states. The other is the unwillingness of the far more numerous and intrinsically more powerful nations to prevent them from running amuck. Yet no nation can afford to permit that state of affairs to continue indefinitely.

Apparently they are not prepared to. The signs are now multiplying that the cynical disregard by certain nations of the elementary rules of international decency has secured about all the advantages possible. What has been sauce for the goose may now be sauce for the gander.

After all, New York and Washington are today no further from Europe and Asia than was Shanghai from Tokyo only a decade ago. And what is happening at Shanghai today, what is happening in Spain and in the waters around Spain outlines the shape of things to come for all nations and all peoples.

The time to organize a fire brigade is before a threatened conflagration starts. And while, in an atmosphere of universal suspicion, the maintenance by each householder of a water bucket of his own is better than nothing, the logic of united effort holds as true in the world of nations as in the world of man.

In the Mediterranean, none too soon, that logic is about to be applied.

Chautauqua

By William Lyon Phelps

Memories.

I have just returned from a visit to Chautauqua, after nearly 50 years. I spent the summer there in 1888 and in 1889, for athletic purposes; I have always been a play-boy, and I went to that center of intellectual culture merely to play ball. Prof. W. R. Harper, afterward president of the University of Chicago, and Amos Alonzo Stagg, the greatest baseball pitcher in the history of university athletics, persuaded me to go, and I enjoyed playing on that baseball nine so much that I returned the next summer in 1889. I also took courses in French and German and faithfully attended lectures, and heard some of the greatest speakers and musicians in the world.

• • • •

Now in this summer of 1937 I went there again, but this time to give lectures, and I got a thrill immediately by meeting Bert Moore, who played with me on the nine in 1888, and whom I have not seen since. He at that time won the prize for best fielding average and I won the prize for best batting average; he showed me the document signed by the great Stagg, and I told him of mine, of which I am proud, inscribed by Stagg:

1888, W. L. Phelps—Batting Average, .389.

On this later visit I was enormously impressed by Chautauqua; its natural beauties are the same, its recreation advantages immensely increased by one of the most beautiful golf courses I have ever seen, by many tennis courts, and every opportunity for those who wish to live amphibiously. The magnificent new Norton Hall has a theater and opera house as fully equipped as any Broadway institution, there's a superb orchestra whose Sunday afternoon concerts are broadcast, with soloists from the Metropolitan Opera House. I regard Chautauqua as a great contributor to the culture of America and to the civilization of the world.

I should like to recommend to readers of this column a slender volume, published in 1936, called "Chautauqua Poets." It is an anthology edited by Dudley Gordon, with Emily Hammond as honorary editor. A board of ten judges selected the poems. The book is published by the Chautauqua Press, and is printed at the Journal Press, Inc., Jamestown, N. Y. There are 34 poets represented, and if one wishes to know how those who know Chautauqua best really feel about it, the last poem in the volume, "Moment of Farewell," speaks adequately. But although they are all Chautauqua poets, this "Farewell" is the only one locally relevant; the others express various moods. Here is a fine picture in four lines, by Franklin Rowell Hoff:

Text of Lewis Speech

Excerpted text of radio speech last night by John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization:

Out of the agony and travail of economic America, the Committee for Industrial Organization was born. To millions of Americans, exploited without stint by corporate industry and socially debased beyond the understanding of the fortunate, its coming was as welcome as the dawn to the night watcher. To a lesser group of Americans, infinitely more fortunately situated, blessed with larger quantities of the world's goods and insolent in their assumption of privilege, its coming was heralded as a harbinger of ill, sinister of purpose, of unclean methods and nonvirtuous objectives.

But the Committee for Industrial Organization is here. It is now and henceforth a definite instrumentality, destined greatly to influence the lives of our people and the internal and external course of the Republic.

This is true only because the purpose and objectives of the Committee for Industrial Organization find economic, social, political and moral justification in the hearts of the millions who are its members and the millions more who support it. The organization and constant onward sweep of this movement exemplifies the resentment of the many toward the selfishness, greed and the neglect of the few. The workers of the Nation were tired of waiting for corporate industry to right their economic wrongs, to alleviate their social agony and to grant them their political rights. Despairing of fair treatment, they resolved to do something for themselves. They, therefore, have organized a new labor movement, conceived within the principles of the national bill of rights and committed to the proposition that the workers are free to assemble in their own forums, voice their own grievances, declare their own hopes and contract on even terms with modern industry for the sale of their only material possession—their labor.

Claims 3,718,000 Members.

The Committee for Industrial Organization has a numerical enrollment of 3,718,000 members. It has 32 affiliated national and international unions. Of this number 11 unions account for 2,765,000 members. This group is organized in the textile, auto, garment, lumber, rubber, electrical manufacturing, power, steel, coal and transport industries. The remaining membership exists in the maritime, oil production and refining, shipbuilding, leather, chemical, retail, meat packing, vegetable canning, metalliferous mining, miscellaneous manufacturing, agricultural labor and service and miscellaneous industries. Some 200,000 workers are organized into 507 chartered local units not yet attached to a national industrial union.

In the steel industry the corporations generally have accepted collective bargaining and negotiated wage agreements with the Committee for Industrial Organization. Eight-five per cent of the industry is thus under contract and a peaceful relationship exists between the management and the workers. Written wage contracts have been negotiated with 399 steel companies covering 510,000 men. One thousand and thirty-one local lodges in 700 communities have been organized.

Five of the corporations in the steel industry elected to resist collective bargaining and undertook to destroy the steel workers' union. These companies filled their plants with industrial spies, assembled depots of guns and gas bombs, established barricades, controlled their communities with armed hirelings, leased the police power of cities and mobilized the military power of a State to guard them against the intrusion of collective bargaining within their plants.

During this strike 18 steel workers were either shot to death or had their brains clubbed out by police, or armed hirelings in the pay of the steel companies. In Chicago, Mayor Kelly's police force was successful in killing ten strikers before they could escape the fury of the police, shooting eight of them in the back. One hundred and sixty strikers were maimed and injured by police clubs, riot guns and gas bombs and were hospitalized. Hundreds of strikers were arrested, jailed, treated with brutality while incarcerated and harassed by succeeding litigation. None but strikers were murdered, gassed, injured, jailed or maltreated. No one had to die except the workers who were standing for the right guaranteed them by the Congress and written in the law.

Davey of Ohio, successful in the last election because of his reiterated promises of fair treatment to labor, used the military power of the Commonwealth on the side of Republic Steel Co. and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. Nearly half of the staggering military expenditure incident to the crushing of this strike in Ohio was borne by the Federal Government through the allocation of financial aid to the military estabment of the State.

Ruthlessness Charged.

The steel workers have now buried their dead, while the widows weep and watch their orphaned children become objects of public charity. The murder of these unarmed men has never been publicly rebuked by any authoritative officer of the State or Federal Government. Some of them, in extenuation, plead lack of jurisdiction, but murder as a crime against the moral code can always be rebuked without regard to the niceties of legalistic jurisdiction by those who profess to be the keepers of the public conscience.

Shortly after Kelly's police force in Chicago had indulged in their bloody orgy, Kelly came to Washington looking for political patronage. That patronage was forthcoming and Kelly must believe that the killing of the strikers is no liability in partisan politics.

Meanwhile, the steel puppet Davey is still Governor of Ohio, but not for long I think—not for long.

While the men of the steel industry were going through blood and gas in defense of their rights and their homes and their families, elsewhere on the far flung C. I. O. front the hosts of labor were advancing and intelligent and permanent progress was being made. In scores of industries plant after plant and company after company were negotiating sensible working agreements.

Labor does not seek industrial strife. It wants peace, but a peace with justice. In the long struggle for labor's rights it has been patient and forbearing. Sabotage and destructive syndicalism have had no part in the American labor movement. Workers have kept faith in American institutions.

The United States Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, and similar groups representing industry and financial interests, are rendering a disservice to the American people in their attempts to frustrate the organization of labor and in their refusal to accept collective bargaining as one of our economic institutions. These groups are encouraging a systematic organization of vigilante groups to fight unionization under the sham pretext of local interests. They equip these vigilantes with tin hats, wooden clubs, gas masks and lethal weapons and train them in the arts of brutality and oppression. They bring in snoops, finks, hatchet gangs and Chowderhead Cohens to infest their plants and disturb the communities. Fascist organizations have been launched and financed under the shabby pretext that the C. I. O. movement is communistic. The real breeders of discontent and alien doctrines of government and philosophies subversive of good ctitizenship are such as these who take the law into their own hands. No tin hat brigade of goose stepping vigilantes or bibble-babbling mob of blackguarding and corporation paid scoundrels will prevent the onward march of labor, or divert its purpose to play its natural and rational part in the development of the economic, political and social life of our nation.

Unionization, as opposed to communism, presupposes the relation of employment; it is based upon the wage system and it recognizes fully and unreservedly the institution of private property and the right to investment profit. It is upon the fuller development of collective bargaining, the wider expansion of the labor movement, the increased influence of labor in our national councils, that the perpetuity of our democratic institutions must largely depend.

Workers Want Voice.

Do those who have hatched this foolish cry of communism in the C. I. O. fear the increased influence of labor in our democracy? Do they fear its influence will be cast on the side of shorter hours, a better system of distributed employment, better homes for the underprivileged, social security for the aged, a fairer distribution of the national income?

Certainly the workers that are being organized want a voice in the determination of these objectives of social justice.

Certainly labor wants a fairer share in the national income. Assuredly labor wants a larger participation in increased productive efficiency. Obviously the population is entitled to participate in the fruits of the genius of our men of achievement in the field of the material sciences. Labor has suffered just as our farm population has suffered from a viciously unequal distribution of the national income.

In this connection let me call attention to the propaganda which some of our industrialists are carrying on among the farmers. By pamphlets in the milk cans or attached to machinery and in countless other ways of direct and indirect approach, the farmers of the Nation are being told that the increased price of farm machinery and farm supplies is due to the rising wage level brought about by the Committee for Industrial Organization. And yet it is the industrial millions of this country who constitute the substantial market for all agricultural products. The interests of the two groups are mutually dependent. It is when the pay roll goes down that the farmer's realization is diminished, so that his loans become overdue at the bank and the arrival of the tax collector is awaited with fear.

Would Avoid Strikes.

Under the banner of the Committee for Industrial Organization American labor is on the march. Its objectives today are those it had in the beginning: to strive for the unionization of our unorganized millions of workers and for the acceptance of collective bargaining as a recognized American institution. It seeks peace with the industrial world. It seeks co-operation and mutuality of effort with the agricultural population. It would avoid strikes. It would have its rights determined under the law by the peaceful negotiations and contract relationships that are supposed to characterize American commercial life. Until an aroused public opinion demands that employers accept that rule, labor has no recourse but to surrender its rights or struggle for their realization with its own economic power.

The objectives of this movement are not political in a partisan sense. Yet it is true that a political party which seeks the support of labor and makes pledges of good faith to labor must, in equity and good conscience, keep that faith and redeem those pledges. The spectacle of august and dignified members of Congress, servants of the people and agents of the Republic, skulking in hallways and closets, hiding their faces in a party caucus to prevent a quorum from acting upon a labor measure, is one that emphasizes the perfidy of politicians and blasts the confidence of labor's millions in politicians' promises and statesmen's vows.

Labor next year cannot avoid the necessity of a political assay of the work and deeds of its so-called friends and its political beneficiaries. It must determine who are its friends in the arena of politics as elsewhere. It feels that its cause is just and that its friends should not view its struggle with neutral detachment or intone constant criticism of its activities. Those who chant their praises of democracy, but who lose no chance to drive their knives into labor's defenseless back must feel the weight of labor's woe, even as its open adversaries must ever feel the thrust of labor's power. Labor, like Israel, has many sorrows. Its women weep for their fallen and they lament for the future of the children of the race.

It ill behooves one who has supped at labor's table and who has been sheltered in labor's house to curse with equal fervor and fine impartiality both labor and its adversaries when they become locked in deadly embrace.

Congratulations to one of the Government's really talented workers, Mary F. Benson, artist for the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine . . . She has just completed a series of picture sheets, in brilliant color, of the various insect pests . . . These will be distributed into educational channels . . . The sheets, by illustration and printed text, describe the various stages of development . . . And the coloring of these is something the artist had long striven for; an appropriation for that type of work was but recently forthcoming . . . An interesting feature is that the artist went afield, personally, for her wriggly, creepy subjects . . . She found them at the Government's Arlington farm.

Artist Benson yesterday was on the tedious task of drawing a Naupacutus, a beetle or some such thing that threatens to become another farm problem down in the Gulf Coast area.

The lady at the desk was attending her own business (which is voluminous). A gentleman entered and engaged her in conversation about the beauties and refinements of Los Angeles; then obliqued upon the topic of how much he desired a job . . . He went upstairs on his job quest, then returned to ask the lady if she could lend him 20 cents . . . She lent him a quarter, having assurance that the loan would be repaid as soon as the borrower heard from Los Angeles . . .

Days went by . . . Yesterday the gentleman returned, said to the lady: "Do you remember me?" He mentioned the quarter, and said that his intentions were still fine, and would pay as soon as he heard from Los Angeles . . . This time, he sought only a minor favor: Would she mind doing some stenographic work on a huge form relating to a business matter? . . . "I hardened myself," related the lady, "and ordered him from my desk!. .

'Lost Horizon' Is Triumphant Bit of Fantasy

Ronald Colman Screen Star With Fine Stage Bill at the Earle.

"LOST HORIZON." Columbia Pictures' filmization of the novel by James Hilton, adapted to the screen by Robert Riskin, starring Ronald Colman, with Jane Wyatt, Margo, Edward Everett Horton, John Howard, Thomas Mitchell, Isabel Jewell, H. B. Warner, Sam Jaffe, David Torrence, Hugh Buckler, Willie Fung, John Milters, John T. Murray, Noble Johnson, Margaret McWade and the Hall Johnson Choir. Directed by Frank Capra. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theater by Mary Harris.

Incredible adventures in a lost and beautiful land beyond the ken of geographers, death in the eternal snows of the Himalayas, flight as revolution roars—these are a few of the master thrills of "Lost Horizon," a truly remarkable film.

Buried in the heart of Tibet, land of mystery, is the Valley of the Blue Moon, Shangri-La, strange paradise where strife is unknown and mankind live for centuries in full possession of their faculties.

Into this azure Eden comes tumbling a party of European refugees who had fled a revolution in the interior of China only to find their plane steered by a strange Mongolian pilot and headed for the white peaks of Tibet instead of the safety of Shanghai. Their plane crashes against a mountain, a party of natives appears and through a narrow mountain pass the refugees are lead to the paradisical valley.

Here they find a palace surrounded by wide gardens and fountains, luxurious and cordial entertainment, a land flowing with milk and honey. But there is no egress from the valley save with the practical certainty of death in the mountains. Once in a period of years there comes a train of pack carriers from the outside world. The Europeans are marooned, perhaps for life.

Land of Strange Loves.

Ronald Colman plays an English government executive, with John Howard as his headstrong younger brother. Both fall in love with European girls who had been rescued from exploring parties, but John's girl friend is a little Russian beauty (Margo), who is really 70 years old, though she looks only 20. The Russian accompanies the brothers when they escape, but the hardships of the trail cause her suddenly to fade to the appearance of her real 70 years. This grisly apparition is too much for John and with an unearthly scream he rushes over a cliff. His older brother gets back to civilization somehow only to turn back at once to the delights of Shangri-La.

Though the tall fantasy of the story gives its outstanding quality to "Lost Horizon," its lavish production and excellent acting and direction give the great story proper setting and force.

Only Ronald Colman could have played so properly the leading role. At present, he is the only leading man in Hollywood who possesses the blend of strength, fineness and vision for such an exacting part.

A Sensational Value.

Margo and Jane Wyatt both play well as the beauties of the Valley of the Blue Moon, though it seemed to this critic that Miss Wyatt was hardly spirituelle enough for her part which called aloud for the Ann Harding of ten years ago.

The Earle presentation of "Lost Horizon" marks its debut at popular prices. But "Lost Horizon" was an entertainment bargain at high prices. At popular prices it is what merchants call a "sensational value."

The length of "Lost Horizon" limits the stage presentation to one big act, and a "big act" in every sense of the term.

Paul Tisen and his Hotel Astor Orchestra, supplemented by the singing Legionnaires and dancing Harris and Yvonne Ashburn, constitute strictly Grade A diversion.

Director Tisen, though modestly failing to stress his own personality, is a marvelous violinist as well as a fine director. The delicate graduation of his one violin solo held the audience to breathless attention. The Legionnaires sing with the ease of bass (also tenor and barytone) canaries. Yvonne Ashburn, assisted by Partner Harris, does dances that really merit that overworked word—glamorous.

This Tisen entertainment also rates large thank-yous from the amusement-devoted public as being one act that deletes trick introductions and begs for "a big hand." They roll their act out speedily and sweetly, without interruptive blah-blah. It's a new style that should be followed.

Columbia

If, as Pearl Buck thinks, "the life of a great nation is expressed in the lives of its humblest people," she can well be pleased with the cinematic version of her popular book, "The Good Earth." For Farmer Wang and his wife, O-lan, are the humblest of the humble.

O-lan is a former slave, freed by her marriage to Wang. They have sons, Wang rebuilds his house, enriches his land, acquires more land, buys the Great House where O-lan was a slave. After a dazed interlude with an exotic dancing girl, he returns to his native land. Now he has two grown sons to help him. But O-lan dies, tired, weary, but happy that Wang returns to the good earth.

This is the plot proper, concerning the main characters. Corollary is the life of the nation: famine in the North, exodus to the South; revolution. Perhaps the best single photographic aspect of the excellent picture is the handling of the invasion of the locusts.

Noteworthy support is given by Players Walter Connolly, Charles Grapewin and Jesse Ralph. Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, in the leading roles, are worth all the lavish adjectives which have been leveled at them.

Put this on your list of plays which assist in the coming of Age of the cinema.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Big City' Combines Many Entertaining Facets, Including Fights.

"BIG CITY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Norman Krasna, adapted to the screen by Dore Schary and Hugo Butler, costarring Luise Rainer and Spencer Tracy, with Charles Grapewin, Janet Beecher, Eddie Quillan, Victor Varconi, Helen Troy, William Demarest, John Arledge, Guinn Williams, Regis Toomey, Paul Harvey, Andrew Tombes, Grace Ford, Alice White and 15 former boxing and wrestling champions. Directed by Frank Borzage. Previewed Tuesday, August 31, at the Capitol.

There are elements of entertainment in this diverting subject that one scarcely would expect to find combined in a single picture. With a seething metropolitan background, as its name implies, "Big City" is compositely amusing comedy, tender romantic drama and a peculiarly vibrant sort of serio-comic melodrama.

BELL.

The background of the spirited action is a New York taxicab war that hesitates at no form of physical violence as among the rival drivers. One faction is led by an honest transportation head, the other by a gang of racketeers bent on monopolizing the gasoline utility business. Joe Benton is one of the drivers on the side against which the onslaught is waged, trying to eke out a comfortable existence for his demure little foreign-born wife and expected baby. One of his pals enlists on the other side, as an "under cover" man, and is tricked into a seeming crime that brings the mayor and the district attorney into the fray and promises jail sentences for those found guilty. Events are so manipulated as to make it appear that Anna Benton's deportation offers the only solution of the difficulty that confronts those closest and dearest to her.

It is upon this circumstance that the entire structure of the drama's serious aspects has its foundation. There are times when it looks pretty dark for the Benton family and the simple folk forming their group of intimate acquaintances and friends. The hoodlums, by the very criminality of their methods, seem to have all the best of it. Anna slips away and boards an outbound steamer for her native Russia at a time when motherhood seems imminent. It is then that the fireworks start.

Champions in Bunches.

The fireworks consist of the enlistment of a large group of sports figures encountered at Jack Dempsey's Restaurant when Joe Benton hurries there from the dock to seek the mayor's intervention on behalf of his wife and enable her to have her baby before the boat sails. Simultaneously, the gangster mob decides to break up a few more rival cabs at Pier 43. What happens after that provides a climax that hasn't been equaled for strenuous action within the memory of those now living. One guess should be enough as to who won the war, with Jack Dempsey, James J. Jeffries, Jimmy McLarnin, Maxie Rosenbloom, Jim Thorpe, Frank Wyckoff, Jackie Fields, "Man Mountain" Dean, Gus Sonnenberg, George Godfrey, Joe Rivers, Cotton Warburton, "Bull" Montana, Snowy Baker and Taski Hagio recruited on the side of virtue.

The Benton roles, completely divergent except that they share a common affection, are played with consummate mastery by Spencer Tracy and Luise Rainer. This is hardly the sort of thing in which Miss Rainer might be expected to be at her best, but she imbues the role of the young wife with a wistfulness, a plaintive pathos and a romantic intensity that stamp her performance as one of her major screen achievements. Spencer Tracy, as the cab driver whose personal inclinations are subordinated to his sense of famil duty, is perfectly fitted with his part. He plays with utmost deliberation and repression, but throughout the movement of the play exercises an irresistible quality of subtle humor and substantial worth that match his costar's in effectiveness.

The supporting cast is composed of players well adapted to the assignments in which they have been placed. Charles Grapewin is a sagacious and highly human mayor, who looks down his nose while the debacle of the dock is in progress, and Paul Harvey and Andrew Tombes are little less to be applauded for their impersonations of the D. A. and Inspector Matthews, respectively. They do a little pummeling on their own account in that horrendous last scene, evening their scores with William Demarest and Russell Hopton, leaders of the racketeering company of thugs and thus saving the city a lot of court expense. Others who contribute notably to the successful blending of the picture's odd content include Janet Beecher, Eddie Quillan, Victor Varconi, an excellent actor seen too seldom of late; John Arledge, as the youth who unwittingly starts all of the garage trouble; Guinn Williams, Regis Toomey, Grace Ford and Alice White, another who has long been absent from the celluloids. Frank Borzage's direction is at all times deft and understanding.

"Every Man For Himself."

At yesterday afternoon's second performance, the Capitol's stage bill somehow failed to jell. Presided over with his customary energetic good humor by Johnny Perkins, held over for the second week as chief comedian and master of ceremonies, the several individually competent acts worked like Trojans with only slightly appreciable results.

The Guardsman, a double male quartet, opened proceedings—after the cylindrical Mr. Perkins' introductory banter—with a brace of medleys and were followed by Georgie Hayes, a British toe dancer, who accomplishes remarkable feats on a flight of 15 steps, probably breaking every bone in both feet. "Satchel," the Capitol's barytone porter, is next introduced in "Ol' Man River" and "That's Why Darkies Were Born" and yesterday literally "stole the show."

In the headline spot, Fifi D'Orsay returns to the Capitol as an auburn-haired singing comedienne, instead of a raven brunette, and reveals the same dynamic endowments that always have characterized her work. Her songs range from Frenchy character studies to rousing "swing" numbers and are executed with both charm and vigor.

The bill is closed by Lew Parker & Company in monologues and an amusing cross-fire with a pair of stooges planted at each side of the orchestra floor in the guise of house decorators.

Phil Lampkin conducts his orchestra on the stage this week and utilizes his medley overture as a means of introducing new members of his ensemble, all of whom met with hearty favor. The Fox Movietone News rounds out a program on which the feature picture, Mr. Perkins and Mlle. D'Orsay are "tops."

Metropolitan

That droll fellow Jack Benny—in association with other droll and tuneful people, among them the Yacht Club Boys, who open the ceremonies and close them; Gail Patrick, Ida Lupino, Martha Raye, Andre Kostalenetz and His Orchestra, Louis Armstrong, a bevy of lovely ladies, who take care of half the title, and a group of famous illustrators, who account for the other half—transfers his talents to the screen of the Metropolitan this week to demonstrate again precisely how a big pageant called "Artists and Models" ought to be staged.

That, of course, also is the name of the picture in which all of these gay goings-on transpire and it is a neat recipe for forgetting the heat in weather like this. Incidentally, can it be possible that there is any weather like this!

But to get on with the show. Mr. Benny is cast as a big advertising man who is angling for a million dollar contract and gets it—but not by any means of his own devising. In the process, events shift about from New York to Miami and way stations, there is a water festival, a model display, a deal of merry chaffing and some very elegant music, for which Andrew Kostalenetz and his noble band are chiefly responsible. Miss Raye's song, "Public Melody No. 1," with Louis Armstrong tooting his treble trumpet, may or may not strike the individual fancy. Not this corner's, at any rate, although Miss Raye makes a fairly seductive "Lulu Belle."

However, the whole affair is done in the grand manner and has many laughs sprinkled about over its surface. Mr. Benny, in his subdued way, is the life of the extravaganza's merrier moments, lustily aided and abetted by the irrepressible Yacht Club Boys—Adler, Kelly, Mann and Kern.

The Metropolitan's bill is augmented by the usual array of short subjects and a full, composite newsreel.

'Stage Door' Setting.

Most of the action in "Stage Door," co-starring Ginger Rogers and Katharine Hepburn, takes place in a theatrical boarding house in New York, where stage-struck girls live in hopes of some day becoming great dramatic actresses.

Academy Winner on Two Screens

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Sept. 3.—Idol chatter: Too bad Eddie Cantor's new picture, "Ali Baba," is being shot in black and white—I have never seen such colorful costumes. John Beal has the leading role in an opus entitled "Women Without Men"—wonder if he should feel insulted? Thought Marlene Dietrich was dramatizing her grief when John Gilbert died, but she still puts flowers on his tomb every week. Tip to Mischa Auer: better get rid of that slave bracelet you have seen wearing—it looks too damned silly for words! I hope a certain producer's wife never finds out how much money he lost in a recent poker game with the boys.

EDDIE CANTOR.

Makes me feel as old as Methusalah to see Mitzi Green a grown-up young lady. Joan Crawford's afternoon teas on the set are becoming a daily event and her director is muttering. Collector's note: Sophie Tucker's assortment of ancient time-pieces has been appraised at $200,000. Some of the glamour girls who are so vain about their beauty would be humbled if they could see pictures of May Robson in her twenties. Credit the Gable influence for Carole Lombard's new hobby, target shooting—and the girl is good at it, too.

Life's little ironies: Marjorie Gateson was brought to Hollywood because of her singing ability; to date she has worked in 14 pictures as a comedienne and has never warbled a note. No more make-up for Joan Marsh—skin is allergic to grease paint. Funny how producers will turn thumbs down on an actor—and then fight for his services after he makes a hit on the stage. Look alikes: Fred MacMurray and U. S. Open golf champ, Ralph Guldahl.

Spent an hour this morning on the set where Hollywood's newest and most "colossal" filmusical is being produced. Between scenes the stage resembled the Mohammedan idea of Paradise—scantily-clad beauties everywhere. Some spent their time practicing intricate dance steps, some laughed and gossiped, some knitted and others—fifty per cent of the lot, at least—read. Seized by a sudden curiosity to know the type of reading matter that would appeal to professional chorines, I checked up—and I have been nursing an inferiority complex ever since. The first six titles jotted down in my notebook were: "Life and Times of Marc Antony," "Finnley Wrenn," "Anchor Man," "Cyrano de Bergerac," "Let Me Die Tuesday" and "How to Earn Money at Home." All that saved my wounded ego was the discovery of one curvacious little blonde, chewing gum ecstatically while she devoured a copy of "True Confessions."

Five years ago this summer—A son was born to "Hollywood's happiest couple," John Barrymore and Dolores Costello. Helen Hayes was sued for alienation of affections by the first Mrs. Charles MacArthur. Ruth Chatterton divorced Ralph Forbes and married George Brent. Jean Harlow married Paul Bern. Bette Davis and Harmon O. Nelson eloped to Yuma. Sam Goldwyn predicted in a signed story that Anna Sten would be the screen's greatest star. John Gilbert and Virginia Bruce were married in a simple ceremony attended only by intimate friends. Gene Raymond stated in an interview that he would never marry an actress.

Claudette Colbert, judged "through" in pictures, was given a new lease on life by a vamp role in "Sign of the Cross." Garbo made a trip to Sweden—and every fan magazine printed predictions that she would never return.

The champion worrier of all Hollywood is William Powell. Preferably, he worries about weighty matters but lacking those—and a man with a $1,000,000 contract often finds himself at a loss for full-grown troubles—he still manages to do a masterly job of making mountains out of mole hills too small for the average person's notice. I chatted with him on the set this morning and found him in a perfect stew about a newspaper prediction that a new business slump is close at hand. Like a good Samaritan, I tried to cheer his day, but he would have none of my optimism. "Listen," he said, "I'm where I am today because I was afraid of poverty. I worried myself into success—and nobody's going to stop me now." And so I left him on the verge of a breakdown—but happy.

"THIN ICE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the play, "Der Komet," by Attila Orbok, adapted to the screen by Boris Ingster and Milton Sperling, costarring Sonja Henie and Tyrone Power, with Arthur Treacher, Raymond Walburn, Joan Davis, Sig Rumann, Alan Hale, Leah Ray, Melville Cooper, Maurice Cass, George Givot and George Davis. Music by Lew Pollack and Sidney D. Mitchell and Gordon and Revel. Directed by Sidney Lanfield. Previewed Wednesday, September 1, Palace.

As a plausible excuse for the introduction of a further demonstration of Sonja Henie's sensational prowess as an ice skater, there has been contrived here a rollicking tale of comedy romance, with its locale in the high Alps, in which she is cast as skating instructor at a swanky, but depopulated, resort hotel that is having a tough season because there is no snow. But the manager lies gracefully about that and secures the booking of an international conference requiring all of the accommodations in the place.

Among the visitors is Prince Rudolph, a youthful sovereign, who remains incognito to all but the rival delegates whom he is commissioned by his prime minister to keep at each other's throats. Meeting the athletic Fraulein Lili Heiser on an early-morning skiing jaunt, the Prince finds other occupations than sticking strictly to his job. Seen alighting from his car one night, Lili is mistakenly suspected by the villagers of having infatuated the Prince. This is put to work as a clever means of bringing about international amities for which the conclave has been called. Lili has herself a bit of a time, and her avaricious uncle fattens his pocketbook, at the expense of the rival Count and Baron intrusted with their countries' welfare.

Well-Matched Co-Stars.

There is a faint flavor of "The King and the Chorus Girl" hovering about "Thin Ice," although the plot is as transparent as the title. It is all planned primarily—and very judiciously—as a field day on skates for Miss Henie. Her ice ballets are the positive ultimate in dazzling speed and brilliance, with the star executing figures in a palatial indoor rink that seem all but unbelievable for one so young and diminutive. In addition to her skill on the blades, Miss Henie displays a considerable improvement in acting ability and has lost virtually all of her accent.

In the opposite role of the prince, Tyrone Power gives an especially able account of himself. He plays with a natural ease and effective reading that make his romance with the little skating teacher a wholly understandable and inspiriting development. This young Mr. Power gives promise of going places on the screen and will do with a deal of watching as one of the smoothest of the younger leading men. He is rightfully co-starred with Miss Henie in their present vehicle, which, incidentally, had a cooling effect upon yesterday's audiences at Loew's Palace.

There are some superlative comedy performances scattered around among the supporting players. Foremost in this connection should be mentioned an eccentric young woman by the name of Joan Davis, who poses as conductor of a female orchestra, but is, in fact, a singing comedienne of the first water—or, perhaps better said, of the first snow. Her songs and dances are gems of discreet clowning. Then there are Raymond Walburn, as Lili Heiser's avuncular pest; Arthur Treacher, the prince's valet, who has not too many sparkling lines to speak, and George Givot, without his twisted dialect.

On the slightly more serious side, but still comic to a degree, are Alan Hale and Maurice Cass, as the Baron and the Count, who are hoist by their own petard. Melville Cooper is a dandy of a hotel manager, with a striking resemblance to a popular Washington radio announcer whose name will not be divulged but whose initials are Lee Everett!

Varied Subsidiaries.

Choice among the supplementary attractions will be a matter of personal taste. Mickey Mouse cavorts through one of Walt Disney's inimitable cartoon comedies, "Little Hiawatha," for many laughs; crime is touched upon in the short-reel, "It May Happen to You" and "Events of the Day' sets forth the news items that appealed to the eye of the cameraman.

A single-reel subject that is interesting, despite the fact that it is no more than a seasonal "plug" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures, is "Romance in Celluloid," from which may be gleaned something of how the 1,000,000,000 feet of film a year used in the making of motion pictures comes into being.

But above everything else, after all is said and done, the thing that will cling to memory in 'Thin Ice" is the agile wizardry of Sonja Henie once she has those skates clamped onto her No. 3 shoes. No wonder she won the Olympic championship!

"THE LIFE OF THE PARTY." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Joseph Santley, featuring Harriet Hilliard, Gene Raymond, Helen Broderick, Victor Moore, Joe Penner, Billy Gilbert and Parkyakarkus. Directed by William Seiter. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

Maybe we just weren't in a party mood. That may be it. Personally, though, we're more inclined to believe that the life of the party was not in a party mood.

The roster of performers in this latest RKO expression of faith that in union there is strength, is a long one. Glance at the fine print above and make up your own mind as to assets and liabilities. Our own ideas about sheep and goats place Miss Harriet Hilliard, Miss Helen Broderick and an unidentified but very skillful young tap danceress on the asset side. In addition to the actors among the debits, we would put the plot maker and the dialogue writer.

The story concerns a young lady who has a yen for a career and a mother who wants her to marry Joe Penner. (An unnatural mother if there ever was one.) Then there is a young man who will have $3,000,000 if he waits until he is 30 to marry, but, once he meets Miss Hilliard, doesn't want to wait. Perfectly understandable.

Complications Arise.

With the young lady needing a husband to save her from Penner, and the young man not needing a wife in order to save his three million, you can see major complications, or can you?

There are songs and bands and "specialties" and make-believe weddings and the weakest ending of the year.

It is all pretty second rate save for Miss Hilliard (we like her, you notice), who brightens the corner where she is, and the crackling Miss Broderick. Parkyakarkus' material could have been funny if someone else had been using it; and poor Victor Moore would surely have been funny if he had been given any material to use.

One minor high point is the sad demise of Mr. Penner as a one-man band. The bag-pipes burst; he simply cannot get a grip on the mouth organ, and everything goes smash in a sort of wish-fulfillment scene. Then, in our Pollyannish hunt for things to laugh at, we find that brief conversation between a young lady and her dog. (If you listen closely, you'll note a Penner-like tone in the pup's tenor.)

Some Nice Tunes.

Some of the tunes are distinctly nice, particularly the "Yankee Doodle Band" item. The new Mrs. Gene Raymond doesn't seem to have gotten in much good work on Gene's pipes as yet. He is still not a singer, but Miss Hilliard is.

Subsidiaries include a tour of California's famous missions, interesting pictorially; a cartoon comedy; the newsreel, and a trailer about Deanna Durbin, indicating that next week will be Keith's week.

Trans-Lux

Fall blows a cool breeze across the Trans-Lux screen—football practice comes along to take the sports spotlight. But the China-Jap war still rages and the news pictures from the Shanghai zone are growing more spectacular and gruesome.

The American news-front is changing for the cameras: Roosevelt is resting, attending county fairs; Sir Malcolm Campbell turns to speedboats; cotton is being picked in the South; salmon spawning in Washington and Oregon; Girl Scouts finish their summer frolic; the Russians go in for fall sports festivals; Florida gets her first fall storm and the West Pointers practice at Fort Benning, Ga.

One of the most distinctive of Trans-Lux features continues to hold its own as the summer wanes, the fast and furious review of the sports kingdom. This week swimmers—of every kind and size—are in abundance. And tennis, yachting, polo, Mr. Louis and Mr. Farr speaking their minds on fighting, and horse racing with no jockeys all flash in curious sequence for an accumulated sports record that is always engrossing.

Religion and the Nazis, in conclave in New York, are among the lesser news items. A fishing subject—herring, of all things—and a Mickey Mouse color cartoon top off the Trans-Lux menu.

Estabrook Without Faith, Bequeaths Love to Entire World.

A remarkable will, in which the late Leon M. Estabrook, well-known Government employe, welcomed death, philosophized over the mystery of what would follow it, asked for a "cheerful and joyous" funeral and bequeathed love to the world was filed for probate in Frederick, Md., yesterday.

Estabrook died at his country place near Frederick two weeks ago. He had been in ill health and nearly blind since his retirement from the Government service. He represented the United States in the last international agricultural census.

In his will, written in his own hand in 1934, Estabrook confessed that he had "never had the faith," but he said he looked forward to death as serenely as the religiously devout.

"Good-By."

The philosophical portion of his will, that dealing with the greatest of all mysteries—What after death?—follows:

"And now, my dears, and all my friends, in anticipation of the time when consciousness in this body of mine shall have ceased, I will say good-by, adieu, adios, voya con deos, God be with you 'til we meet again, au revoir, hasta la vista, a reverderci and auf wiedersehen, and good luck.

"The law of life is perpetual change and that is what makes it so interesting. The inevitable change that is commonly called death is about to come to me as it is to you and all living things. I welcome it because I have already lived longer than I expected or intended.

"Neither I nor you asked to be born into this world. I as well as you have simply tried to make the best of it. We know that the material of our bodies is immortal and simply changes it's form. But we do not know what becomes of the spirit and consciousness associated with the organized materials of our bodies. We hope that the spirit and conscious identity and memory will survive the great change, but it is only a hope because from all those who have gone before nothing definite and satisfactory has come to us.

"Unquestionably, hope has given faith to many good people that was a help and a consolation to them, but to me it has always seemed that their minds were closed and they were blind to many obvious considerations quite as convincing as anything they could bring to the support of their faith.

"I have never had the faith, but feel that I have been quite as happy and certain of the future and was leading quite as useful and moral a life as they did. I feel that I look to the outcome of the great change which they call death with quite as much confidence and anticipation as they or any other so-called religious people do.

"To me, the change called death means simply one of two things: Either complete cessation of consciousness and eternal rest, or a new and conscious life. If it means rest, I always did like sleep and always had pleasant dreams that were a part of my conscious life. I welcome the prospect of eternal sleep, with or without dreams.

"If the great change does not mean eternal sleep, then it must mean some new form of life. If so, I welcome that and will hope to make as good a showing in the new life as in this old one. At any rate, I have long been ready and waiting for it, especially since my eyesight has failed until I am nearly blind.

"And so, my dears, I want you to think of me as going to the inevitable change cheerfully, lightheartedly and gladly, full of curiosity as to the future, but with absolute confidence that it means rest or a bright future. If it means rest only, then you, too, will soon enjoy the rest. If it means renewed life and conscious memory of this life, then we will soon meet again and enjoy many a laugh at the funny things that happened in this life and how foolish we were about many things.

"As for you, I have forgotten about all the momentary stresses and strains, the little spats and irritations, that were so human and so unimportant, and I remember only your smiles, good humor, helpfulness and loving kindness that made life worth living. I hope you and others can think of me in the same way.

Cremation Is Favored.

"Now, as to the funeral, because I suppose there will have to be one. That is entirely your affair, because after the great change I will not care. I have always favored cremation, and would like to think now that my ashes would be scattered over Observatory Hill—but that is too expensive, and I no longer care. I wish my funeral to be simple and inexpensive as possible and to be buried in my lot near father's in the cemetery at Frederick. I can sleep as peacefully in my grave as my ancestors before me slept.

"All my life I have hated solemnity and gloom and loved light and cheerfulness. I would, therefore, hope that those who follow me to my last resting place will do so cheerfully and joyously. If I had my way, I would decree that all the automobiles should be decorated with bright flowers, and those who take part in the proceedings would wear their holiday clothes and go to the cemetery in the same good spirits as a group of friends go to a ship to say 'bon voyage' to one of their number who is about to sail away on a wonderful voyage of discovery.

"I would like to have them make of it a picnic rather than a funeral, and to think of the departed as having fearlessly, cheerfully and gladly reached the end of his life on this earth, quite ready for and a little curious about what comes after—rest forever or a new life—knowing that it will be what it will be regardless of what people think, believe, say, do, wish, or hope about it. I assume that after I pass out the funeral will not interest me particularly; it's your affair, so do just as you please about it.

"If there is any money left in the pot to pay for it, a flat stone might be set up at the grave with the following inscription:

"Leon M. Estabrook
"Lived and worked
"1869-19—
"With Fairies and Friends
"Loving all Things
"Beautiful

"Greatest and most precious of all things in human life and experience is love—and that I leave to each and all of you."

Important Spot Cards

In former years the opening bid of one notrump was the most ambiguous bid in contract. You might have a balanced hand and then again you might have an unbalanced one. You might have about 3½ honor-tricks and then again you might have as many as 5½. As a general rule, your partner closed his eyes and made a bid, hoping that everything would come out all right. In the modern theory of no trump bidding, however, the opening bid of one notrump always shows a perfectly balanced hand with from four to five honor-tricks. Partner is expected to take some steps toward game with about 1½ honor-tricks, and to make a take-out into two of a suit with most weaker unbalanced hands.

In the hand below, a borderline situation is shown. North's hand is very nearly good enough for a raise to two notrump. The singleton spade, however, coupled with the fact that the hand is worth a shade less than 1½ honor-tricks, influenced North to bid only two diamonds on the first round. This bid would have enabled South to pass had his opening bid been a minimum. South, however, had an excellent fit with the diamonds and a full half honor-trick more than the minimum for an opening bid of one notrump. He, therefore, rebid two notrump and, thus encouraged, North went to game.

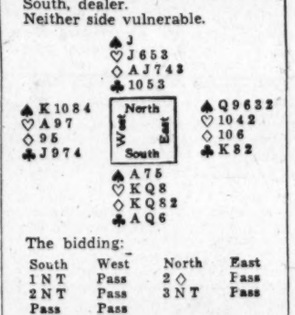
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 N T	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the four of spades and declarer allowed East's Queen to hold the trick. It was possible that West's opening lead had been from a six-card suit and in that case the game might be made if East had the Ace of hearts. His hopes were dashed, however, when East returned the three of spades. This lead indicated that East had started with at least four spades.

South, therefore, made the best of the situation by playing the Ace at once, hoping for a mistake on the part of the opponents. His hopes were realized when West played the eight of spades on his Ace. This play blocked the spade suit and prevented the defenders from taking any more than three spade tricks and the Ace of hearts. Declarer, therefore, made his contract. The game contract was a sound one despite the fact that a mistake by the opponents was necessary to bring it home. Any lead but a spade would have made the hand ironclad, and even with the spade opening there was still the hope that the opponents would blunder.

West should have paid careful attention to the spot cards. Then he would have noticed that on the first trick South dropped the five of spades and that at the second trick his partner returned the three of spades. This was almost conclusive proof that East had the deuce of spades and that his return of the three of spades was designed to show a five-card suit. Had West realized this, he would have played the ten of spades on South's Ace at the second trick. Then East would have been able to win the fourth spade trick with his nine-spot to cash his last spade and defeat the contract.

Committee Ousted As Nazis Tighten Clasp on Church

Berlin, Sept. 3 (AP).—Tightening of the Nazi government's grip on the German Evangelical Church was seen tonight in a curt announcement by Hans Kerrl that he had dismissed the entire church committee of the so-called old Prussian Union.

The government has been in conflict with the church for four years.

Kerrl, head of the government's Department of Church Affairs, transferred the functions of the committee to Friedrich Werner, president of the Supreme Church Council, who is known as a strong Nazi sympathizer, and one assistant.

Informed sources said they believed Kerrl's action was a reprisal against last Sunday's protest of three Confessional bishops and 23 Evangelical leaders against Nazi domination of church affairs.

Buzzers Enforce Secretary Ickes' Punctuality Rule

By the Associated Press.

Every day at 8 a. m., buzzers burr in the new Interior Department Building, a siren wails in the old building, and Secretary Ickes' monitors check their lists of 12,000 employes to see who's late.

Officials said superiors reprimand persons late three times.

Some employes jokingly relate that the day Secretary Ickes summoned division heads to insist on punctuality he was 11 minutes late.

Erma Paul Allen, Artist Born in Washington, Enters Writing Field With Book for Children

Garden City Publishing Co. Accepts Volume on Four Ducklings.

The Post Club Editor.

Erma Paul Allen, formerly of Washington and now a resident of New Rochelle, N. Y., not content with being a well-known artist, has attained another distinction. She has completed a book for children, which has been accepted by the Garden City Publishing Co. and will be out in the fall.

Mrs. Allen, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Paul, 1435 Hemlock street northwest, had planned to combine her art with writing even when she was a student at the National School of Fine and Applied Art and the Corcoran Art School. She did this first with sophisticated little silhouettes illustrating verses, many of which appeared in such magazines as Vanity Fair, Harper's Bazaar and the New Yorker.

Then she had an idea of writing fairy tales for children and illustrating them—an idea she has not abandoned permanently—but she modified it in her first book to an account of the adventures of four little ducks. It is a story presenting realism through fantasy, she says, following the characters in a series of exciting events which might happen in the life of a duckling. She has not insulted the intelligence of her young readers by having the four feathered adventurers do impossible things. They are, however, personalized and carry on "ducky" conversations in language a child from 3 to 7 understands.

Mrs. Allen believes stories for children should be imaginative and happy." There is enough realism in the world without giving it to children in their books," she says.

Her daughter, Charlotte, now 6 years old, was the inspiration for her book. In telling Charlotte stories and drawing pictures to go with them, she found just what interested children of that age. There are 24 pictures in the story and about a thousand words recounting their adventures.

Mrs. Allen recently has been devoting much of her time also to textile design, making children's prints with Mother Goose and circus characters dancing over them.

She has lived in New York since leaving Washington at the time of her marriage in 1924, but is a native Washingtonian. Her husband, Courtney Allen, a noted illustrator, is a son of Mrs. E. B. Allen, of 1906 Pennsylvania avenue, and a brother of John Allen, of the National School of Fine and Applied Arts.

When they were married at the Luther Place Memorial Church, Mrs. Allen had as her maid of honor Miss Inez Hogan, of Provincetown, formerly of Washington, who is now widely known now as an author of juvenile books. Mr. Allen had as best man Charles Dunn, also an artist. They come to Washington with their daughter on frequent visits and have many friends in the Capital.

Mr. Allen's most recent illustrations are for a serial, "Wings North," which will start in a weekly magazine of national circulation in the fall.

Erma Paul Allen, photographed with her young daughter, Charlotte, at their home in New Rochelle, N. Y. Mrs. Allen, wife of Courtney Allen, the illustrator, and herself a well-known artist, has written and illustrated a book for children which will be published this fall.

Panamanian Envoy Asks U. S. to Build Tunnel Under Canal

By the Associated Press.

Panamanian Minister Boyd requested "unofficially" yesterday United States connsideration of a plan to construct a tunnel under the Panama Canal.

Such a tunnel, the minister said, would join the two halves of the Republic of Panama, now separated with no transportation facilities other than a ferry.

Boyd estimated the tunnel would cost approximately $2,000,000 and would be of as great a benefit to the United States as to Panama.

Financing of the tunnel, Boyd explained, could easily come from the income the Government derives from the canal, which, he said, amounts to about $24,000,000 annually.

FTC Asks $40,000 For Quiz Defiance

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—The Government sued the National Biscuit Co. for $40,000 today for not answering fully a Federal Trade Commission questionnaire.

The questionnaire resulted from a 1935 act of Congress providing for a survey of the incomes of farmers and users of flour, sugar, molasses, milk, butter, cheese, eggs, raisins and peanuts in milling, baking and other processing.

The biscuit company was asked how much wheat and other produce, bread, cake and biscuits it bought, manufactured and sold in 1935; the names and purchase amounts of chain store and co-operative customers; and its income and expenses and the salaries and other compensations of its officers.

In February, 1936, Vice President C. S. Stillwell, of the company, wrote the Trade Commission that "we are very hesitant to make public disclosure of information relating to our business because we believe the dissemination of such information would place us at a distinct competitive disadvantage." He asked that the company be excused from answering.

Voteless Voters Board to Meet September 17

Plans of Woman's League for New Season to Be Considered.

MRS. LOUIS OTTENBERG, president of the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters, has called the initial board meeting of the fall season for September 17. Tentative plans for the year's work will be outlined subject to the approval of the membership at its first meeting in November.

Mrs. Ottenberg, who is at her summer home at Belle Harbor, Long Island, was in Washington for a few days last week and will return after Labor Day to stay.

The local branch of the league will follow the program of the national organization in its various departments, Government and Its Operation, Government and Child Welfare, Government and Education, Government and Economic Welfare, Government and the Legal Status of Women and Government and Foreign Policy.

Under Government and Its Operation, the department of which Mrs. Charles Watson is chairman, the league here plans a survey of the need for civil service in the District of Columbia. It is considered that civil service would be a proetction to the local worker, and the survey of the situation will be in line with the national league's stand in support of the merit system.

A study of the tax system also will be made under the chairmanship of Mrs. Harry Lee Parkinson, who is a graduate of Washington College of Law. The local branch also will continue its work for national representation for the District and seek a hearing in the House on the Capper-Norton bill.

Mrs. William Savin is chairman of Government and Eductaion, under which a study of new phases in education will be made with special stress probably on trends in vocational education, although no definite program has been worked out.

A membership drive is planned by the league this year with Mrs. Joseph McKenzie as chairman. An effort will be made especially to interest wives of members of Congress in becoming members as the activities of the organization deal primarily with affairs of government and are nonpartisan.

Roosevelt Catches Only 1 Fish, Hopes To Get More Today

Aboard Yacht Indian, Sept. 3 (AP).—President Roosevelt turned from Hyde Park squire to Long Island fisherman today, but in many hours of trolling the ocean side of Montauk Light he snagged only one fish.

Only two others were caught by the yacht Potomac's vacation party—a blue and a striped bass.

The President, refreshed from the day's cruising, planned to try his luck again tomorrow on the sound side of the Island. He also may take a run to Block Island, about 20 miles north, and troll for tuna.

If he prolongs his sea trip long enough he also may take in the sailing races off New London next week. He decided to forego watching the Oyster Bay races today.

Veterans' Unit Organized By Moose Women at Session

A VETERANS' ASSOCIATION has been formed by the Women of the Moose at the international conference now in session in Cleveland. All members of the local chapters who have been in good standing continuously for ten years are eligible. Deputy Grand Regent Mary Hooper, of Baltimore, Md., was appointed as the first grand dame of the Veteran Women of the Moose.

In accepting, Mrs. Hooper proposed that the Veterans' Association sponsor the Moosehaven Hospital project at the home for the aged of the fraternity, for which Past Regent Margaret Deegan and the members of her Moosehaven committee of Washington, D. C., chapter have been working during the past year. Mrs. Hooper's proposal received unanimous approval and Mrs. Deegan presented a check from the Washington chapter for $100 to start the National Moosehaven Hospital fund.

Delegates from most of the chapters represented at the meeting immediately subscribed smaller sums and a total of $500 was raised in a few minutes toward this project. Mrs. Hooper, the grand dame, is the deputy regent for the district including the District of Columbia, and has visited the local chapter on many occasions. She welcomed as veterans Past Regents Mrs. Richard Blankenship, Mrs. William Phythian, Mrs. Anna Wagner, Mrs. George B. Clark and Mrs. Wade H. Mitchell, of this city.

The alumni banquet and ball Thursday at the Hollenden Hotel was the principal social event of the conference.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Mitchell, publicity chairman for the local chapter was in charge of the session on publicity introducing the publicity chairmen from the various chapters who are attending the international conference; conducting a class of instruction and a forum discussion on publicity work in the order.

Miss Fern Stover, director of home life at Mooseheart, the home and school for orphaned children of the Moose, conducted the homemaking session yesterday. Miss Stover, much beloved by all the workers in the fraternity, told of the interest of the chapters in specific children or cottages at Mooseheart, especially praising the interest taken by the Washington chapter in Dixie Hall.

The final business session of the international conference was held last night, the conference class being initiated by Ohio women with the new ritual, which will be issued for use by all chapters shortly after the Cleveland meetings. At this meeting Grand Recorder Miss Katherine Smith, of Washington, made her annual report to the Women of the Moose, which showed 26 new chapters instituted, and an increase of 12,000 members during the year. This session completed her tenth year as grand recorder and her financial statement showed the total contributions to Moose philanthropies during her administration of $1,219,482.96 by the women's auxiliaries.

The announcement of the annual awards by the national office to chapters with the best records to the credit of their committees showed Columbia Chapter here winning the publicity prize, and honorable mention for the Mooseheart committee.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Who said news was scarce the week-end before Labor Day?

Here's an item that would make headlines any day in any week. Mrs. C. Phillips Hill announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Frances Montague Hill, to Capt. Colston Dyer, U. S. Marine Corps air service, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Dyer, of Ruxton, Md.

The wedding will take place on Saturday, September 11, at 4 o'clock at Wakefield Manor on Rappahannock River, Va., the home of Miss Hill's aunt, Mrs. George Barnett, widow of the World War commandant of the United States Marine Corps. The ceremony will be performed in the old-fashioned flower garden which is one of the outstanding attractions of the historic estate. A small reception will follow. Only relatives and a few close friends have been invited.

Special Reason For September Date

The wedding date has been placed in September because of the pending departure to the West Coast of Miss Hill's brother and sister-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. Arthur Sinclair Hill. Capt. Dyer was a classmate of Lieut. Hill at Annapolis in the class of 1929.

The bride will be attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Hill, as matron of honor. Other members of her party will be Mrs. Bowman MacArthur, the former Miss Beatrice A. Littlefield, of Washington, and Mrs. William Dudley, of Summit, N. J., who, before her marriage, was Miss Jean Peeples. The best man will be Charles Warfield, of Baltimore, who was also a member of Capt. Dyer's class in Annapolis.

Bride-to-Be Favors Her Famous Cousin

Although Miss Hill is much younger than the Duchess of Windsor, to whom she is related, there is a striking resemblance between the two.

Miss Hill's mother and the Duchess of Windsor's mother were first cousins; and since the former Wallis Warfield has been so much in the news, it has been frequently noted that there is a striking resemblance between Miss Hill and the Duchess of Windsor.

Both do their hair the same way—parted in the middle and drawn to a soft knot at the nape of the neck; and both have large, beautiful eyes. There is a definite contrast in their coloring, however. The duchess has dark hair, while Miss Hill is a blonde; and the bride-to-be is several years younger than the woman whose name and fame have made front-page headlines for many months.

Educated in the Capital, Miss Hill later studied art at the Corcoran Gallery, where she displayed outstanding ability. She is also an accomplished horsewoman and swimmer, and has been an active and popular member of Capital social circles since she made her debut at a tea dance at the Mayflower, given by her parents several years ago.

The bride wore a white satin gown made with a shirred jacket of the same material and a Juliet cap from which fell a shoulder-length veil. She carried a white prayer book decorated with lilies of the valley.

Her only attendant was Miss Mildred McGuffin, of Chattanooga, Tenn., who wore a frock of light blue moire with accessories to match and carried pink roses. John Langenegger, of Washington, was best man.

After a reception at the home of Mr. Wolford's parents, 1421 Kalmia road, the couple left for a motor trip through the Shenandoah Valley and other places in Virginia. The bride attended Columbia University and Mr. Wolford is a graduate of New York University.

They will wear identical gowns in contrasting shades of taffeta, four in old rose and four in American beauty shade. They will carry old fashioned nosegays and their only ornament will be a gold locket given to each of her attendants by the bride.

An informal reception at the home of the bride's parents will follow the ceremony. Mrs. Mann will wear a blue lace gown with a corsage of pink rosebuds, and the mother of the bridegroom will wear a frock in lighter shade and a similar corsage.

To Make Home Here.

After a wedding trip in the North, Mr. Shore and his bride will reside here at 1221 Euclid street. The bride will wear as her going-away costume a black tailored suit with a white satin blouse and black accessories.

Mr. Shore attended the University of North Carolina, where he was a member of the Monogram Club and Kappa Alpha fraternity. He is a ranking tennis player and was at one time junior champion of the District of Columbia. His father is associated with the Bureau of Mines here.

Leaves for Florida.

ABOUT THE TOWN

With Dudley Harmon

In summers past, diplomats would rather have been caught almost anywhere else than in Washington over Labor Day. But this year for some reason a number of them won't budge out of the city for the holiday; so cheer up, all you stay-at-homes.

The Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik are actually staying in town on purpose. "I hate crowds," said Mme. Prochnik yesterday, "and we always stay quietly in Washington on holidays." For this reason they came back early from their cottage at Rehoboth Beach, where they have been spending the summer. Their son-in-law, Francis Spalding, sails tonight for his consular post at Stuttgart after a short visit with them at the legation.

The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito came back from Hot Springs last week and are now "in residence" again at the embassy on Massachusetts avenue, where they will celebrate Labor Day. Others who will be here are Victor Mallet, popular Counselor of the British Embassy, who will be joined early in November by Mrs. Mallet, still in England, and Philip Broad, Second Secretary of the Embassy, who sails the end of October for his new post in Teheran.

LABOR DAY will find members of the Cabinet widely scattered. The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson are going for a week-end cruise on the Sequoia, taking with them a "family party," which will include Capt. Jack Beardall, Mr. Swanson's aide, and Mrs. Beardall; Douglas Hall, Mrs. Swanson's son, and Miss Carolyn Norton and William Freeman.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper haven't definitely decided whether to stay or go away, but the chances are they will remain at their Woodland drive home. The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer C. Cummings are still in Vermont, the date of their return indefinite; Miss Perkins is motoring in New England and the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes, is enjoying his first vacation in four years at Acadia National Park in Bar Harbor. The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring are at Winchester, N. Y., for the week-end.

HAVING DECIDED SUDDENLY last Tuesday that it would be fun to take a trip to Europe, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding are sailing today on a Canadian boat for a visit abroad. They land at Havre, and from there will go to Paris for a brief stay. Italy is next on the schedule, and they plan to get in lots of tennis there before sailing back on the Italian liner Conte de Savoia. The first week in October will see them again at their residence on R street in Georgetown.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wilmerding are good at tennis, and are expert bridge players as well. Mrs. Wilmerding was the ward of Walter Lippmann who has visited them here frequently.

MRS. JOUETT SHOUSE, who is noted for her executive ability, has already made plans to entertain a few friends at tea on September 20, although she is still wandering around Europe. A postcard received yesterday asks us to drop in at Wolf Trap Farm, the Shouse country home in Vienna, Va., on that afternoon.

The Shouses will sail from Havre on Thursday and will return to Washington shortly after the middle of the month. They have been motoring from Marienbad, Czechoslovakia, to Kitzhubel in the Austrian Alps and, at the time the postal was written, were in Vienna.

Mrs. Shouse adds that her extensive menagerie at Wolf Trap will be increased by the addition of a 12-weeks-old Boxer pup, which they bought abroad and are carrying around Europe.

MRS. ESTHER B. NORMENT is off for Newport, where she will spend two weeks with Mrs. Peyton Van Rensselaer.

Repeat Ceremony Before New York Mayor.

Paul Y. Anderson, Washington correspondent for the St. Louis Post Dispatch, and Katherine Lane, an actress, went through their second marriage ceremony in a week yesterday in New York. They were married first August 30 by Justice Letts, of the District Supreme Court, but yesterday the ceremony was performed again before Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia at City Hall.

This was because Mr. and Mrs. Anderson had originally planned to be married by the mayor and decided to go through with the ceremony again anyway. Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora was among the small group of friends present at the wedding yesterday.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Theory That Men Prefer "Wild" Girls Arouses Wives Who Say It Has Paid Them to Be Good.

COLUMNIST'S NOTE: Happy wives take the rostrum today in answer to a recent letter in this column by J. F. D., 22-year-old teacher in a private school in Washington, in which she questioned whether it paid to live by present moral canons. "How many husbands and wives," she asked, "are true to persons they marry?" She also asserted: "All the men I've met—even the married men who are pillars of my own church—are all very much alike. Frankly, I can't name ten men of all the men I've met who would not seduce a girl if given the ghost of an opportunity." In reply to J. F. D., the conductor of this column asked for comment by happily married husbands and wives. The following are from among the large number of letters received.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I haven't a heart problem—quite the contrary, I am a very happy contented wife. But the letter from J. F. D. aroused my fighting spirit. Somehow it has always seemed to me that anyone with such a warped point of view as J. F. D. appears to have is a little "teched in the head." The idea of thinking that there aren't any decent men left; I married one and I have a large circle of girl friends who married them.

My husband and I met when we were 18. For eight years (right in the middle of the depression) we waited and hoped and worked and saved until the time came when we finally could march up the aisle. During all of these eight years we loved each other enough to want to save the best until we were married, and we did. We've been married for over two years now and you couldn't find a happier couple. I was a virgin when my husband married me, and he was the proudest man in the world of that fact. And I knew that I was getting a man who had always been true to the ideals his mother instilled in him.

* * * *

... has always been my experience with men that the girls get just what they expect from them. I am not any Greta Garbo, but I have had a few beaux in my time and not one of them ever tried to get fresh with me. I think a man instinctively knows what kind of a girl he is with. My father used to say that no matter how bad a man was, he always wanted to marry a good woman. I don't think times have changed since my father's day.

* * * *

It sounds very much to me as if J. F. D. were trying to excuse herself for something she either has done or is contemplating doing. Don't be silly, J. F. D.—that grand feeling of having your husband proud to introduce you as the Missus is worth everything in the world. I know that I'll keep my husband's love forever, and knowing that one man will love you forever is so much better than being dubiously popular now.

A HAPPY WIFE.

Suburban Idyl.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a happily married wife. We've been married seven years and in my opinion it pays to live by what you term "noble standards." My husband came from a large family and I was an only child. Having to learn to cook, clean, budget, wash out personal garments and iron wasn't my idea of fun. Then having a child to care for without maid and to give up my freedom was a distinct hardship.

* * * *

But we've weathered the seven years, and they weren't easy ones. Not that we were poor, but we were definitely not of the class that could afford help or chasing out every night. And to chase out, dance, go gadding any time of day I wished to, get up bridge games, ride, swim and charge anything within reason had heretofore been my privilege. So you can see that a great many days of boredom came to me.

* * * *

Could I chase out? Be untrue? Of course I couldn't. We're modern, we dress well, dance, have simple fun. And we love each other. We love our child. We put away for the future. We're building something substantial. We're making a good background for our daughter. It's a satisfaction to know that.

* * * *

What do we get out of being true to "noble standards?" We get the greatest things in life even though they seem dull. We get trust, shared responsibility, the knowledge that each is important, that we're not cheap.

And, J. F. D., I have a very wide circle of friends who live the same way and wouldn't live any other. I know other married couples who aren't true, but I wouldn't consider them friends for the reason they don't speak our language. Probably J. F. D. thinks, if she reads this, "How dull that must be." We serve occasional highballs, play a good game of bridge, have learned the tango, belong to well known clubs and really don't sit by the fire and spin. I believe I'm only an average person and I believe there are countless others who live and believe the same. ANONYMOUS.

Tomorrow's Problem.

Lonely 17-year-old girl curbed by the rigid, old-fashioned ideas of her foreign-born parents, complains that she has no social life and is not allowed to have dates with boys. Her condition, she says, has made her physically ill and "disgusted with life." She asks how she can break her chains. This column appears Sunday and daily.

Reward of Virtue.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You are a Daniel come to judgement in the last paragraph of your reply to J. F. D. August 27. I haven't always agreed with you, however.

* * * *

I came to Washington a stranger some years ago and boarded at a place recommended by a dear old clergyman. There were several women in the house who entertained men friends in their rooms. I had evidence without eavesdropping or in any way seeking it that I was in the wrong place. I quietly moved to another house where there was no appearance of evil.

* * * *

One Sunday morning a group of us were in one of the smaller parlors airing our views on subjects in general. I brought out a pamphlet from which I read some extracts and thoughtlessly left it where I had been sitting. A gentleman who came to call on one of the boarders picked it up while waiting and became interested in it. His friend told him it belonged to me. Several weeks later he was introduced to me at a card party and later married me. He has told me that he thought at the time that a woman who read that kind of literature must have very high ideals.

I have nothing to regret. I have a happy, harmonious home in a good suburb. I live a quiet life and do not number among my friends or acquaintances, as far as I know, any inebriates, gamblers or free lovers. Water seeks its level. My grandmother tells me that one-half the world doesn't know how the other half lives. They seem to be telling us in your columns. A. S. H.

Her Ice Box Rolls Win Post Recipe Contest

By Jean Green.
The Post Food Editor.

BY UNANIMOUS consent of the judges, the first prize in last week's Post recipe contest was awarded to Mrs. C. M. Elwell, 1707 Minnesota avenue southeast. Her recipe was for ice box rolls.

This charming matron from Waco, Tex., whose husband is the secretary in Representative W. P. Poage's office, has learned most of her culinary skill in the Southwest. In her fascinating Texas drawl, she explained that until she received this recipe from her mother, she never had been able to master the technique of yeast roll making. The long beating and careful timing had been her Nemesis. With this recipe she never has had a single failure and the rolls have been a delight to her husband.

JEAN GREEN.

The dough for making these rolls can be kept covered in the refrigerator for as long as a week. The actual mixing takes only 15 minutes. After the batter is whipped together, it needs to stand in the refrigerator for at least 7 hours and preferably overnight. By this time the batter will have puffed up in the pan and unless a large pan is used, may be over the top.

Of course, when the first rolls are made, the dough is deflated. The dough not used should be covered with waxed paper and returned to the refrigerator. On standing in the refrigerator it will keep on rising up no matter how many times rolls are made.

Needless to say many friends of Mrs. Elwell already found this Texas recipe a joy. Today it is recommended to Post readers.

Ice Box Rolls.

1 Compressed yeast cake
1 pint of lukewarm water
1 cup of shortening
½ cup of sugar
4 eggs
7 cups of flour
1 teaspoon of salt

Mix the shortening, salt and water and set away to cool. Beat the eggs slightly, add the sugar and yeast cake. Stir this mixture into the shortening and water. Add the flour and mix thoroughly. Cover lightly with wax paper and set in the refrigerator to rise. Dip out with spoon and put into muffin tins to bake. Start with a cold oven and gradually increase heat to 375 degrees.

The second prize of $2 was awarded to Mrs. L. Merrick, 208 Massachusetts avenue northeast, for her recipe for "Washington Pie." This recipe contrasts a tart lemon filling with a rich macaroon base. It has the advantage of not having as many calories as the usually whipped cream ice box cake. When you wish to draw sighs of envy from your bridge group, try it. It is also a grand possibility for a luncheon party dessert.

Washington Pie.

1 dozen macaroons
1 dozen lady fingers

Crumble macaroons on the bottom of pan. Make the recipe of lemon chiffon filling and pour some on macaroons. Split lady fingers and lay on top. Spread more of the filling on them. Set in the refrigerator for several hours or over night. Serve with whipped cream.

Filling.

4 egg yolks (well beaten)
½ cup of sugar

Juice and grate rind of one lemon or juice and grated rind of one orange and juice of ½ lemon.

Soak ½ tablespoon of graulated gelatin in 1-3 cup of cold water. Put the gelatin to soak first. Then beat the yolks until light yellow. Cream in the sugar. Add the lemon or orange juice and rind and cook in double boiler until it thickens like custard. Add the gelatin. Have the four egg whites stiffly beaten with ¼ to ½ cup of sugar and pour hot custard into that.

The third prize of $1 was given Mrs. J. J. Murphy, of 2515 Thirteen street northwest. The salad is attractive and tasteful. The rich tuna mold is topped with thin slices of lemon sparkling through a transparent orange gelatin top. The salad shows off to best advantage when served in cress with a cucumber garnish on a reflecting mirror plate.

1¼ cups of hot water
6 tablespoons of orange juice
¾ teaspoons of salt
⅛ teaspoon of pepper
½ cup of thin cream
1 7-ounce can of tuna fish
1 cup of diced celery
1 cup of cooked peas drained.

Dissolve the softened gelatin in water. To 6 tablespoons of it add orange juice. Pour the orange gelatin into a 7-inch mold. When firm, lay on top a few slices of lemon. Chill the remaining lemon gelatin until beginning to thicken. Stir in the flaked tuna and other ingredients and pour into a mold. Chill in refrigerator and unmold on crisp water cress.

Water Lilies.

Halve crosswise 3 5-inch cucumbers. Remove the centers cut down 6 times to within ½ inch of the bottom. Cut between green and white, making 2 rows of petals. Point them.

Leave the lilies in ice water until opened. Drain. Fill with cream cheese. Make 3 pink and 3 yellow. Arrange on a mirror plate with the salad in the center. Pass tartar sauce or mayonnaise.

Frozen Crab Meat Cocktail.

1 cup of flaked crabmeat
1 teaspoon of gelatin
2 tablespoons of cold water
4 tablespoons of tomato catsup
1 tablespoon of lemon juice
1 tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce
4 teaspoons of French dressing
Salt
Paprika

Soak the gelatin in cold water and dissolve over hot water. Add the catsup, lemon juice, other seasonings, and fish. Turn into freezing trays or place in paper cups in trays and freeze. This freezes in 3 to 4 hours. Serves 4 to 6.

The fifth prize of $1 was awarded Mrs. C. J. Hargis, Vienna, Va. Mrs. Hargis's recipe:

Bridge Party Fruit Cake.

2 tablespoons of orange juice
¼ cup white grapes
½ cup peaches
¼ cup of nut meats
¼ cup of sugar
¼ cup of diced pineapple
¼ cup of diced oranges
¼ cup of cubed bananas
1 cup of cooked salad dressing

Chill all ingredients. Whip cream. Fold into salad dressing. Add the sugar and orange juice. Now mix all ingredients together thoroughly. Put in freezing compartment of the automatic refrigerator.

Serve on lettuce leaves garnished with olives. Accompany with hot rolls and a hot or cold drink. This makes a delicious bridge luncheon.

Recipe Contest

Now that fall is here, the sandwich season is taking a new lease on popular favor. There will be thick meaty sandwiches for fall picnics, nutritious health sandwiches for school lunches, and dainty open-faced sandwiches for fall teas and cocktail parties.

Because the sandwich is such an American institution, it is the theme for the new Post favorite recipe contest. For the best recipes, The Washington Post is awarding five cash prizes. The first prize is $3, the second, $2, and there are three prizes of $1 each.

Write out your recipe on one side of the paper only, include name and address, and mail to Miss Jean Green, Food Editor, The Washington Post, to reach her not later than Saturday noon, September 11. Only one entry from each person will be accepted.

Tinting of Nails Is Growing Custom Of English Women

In spite of masculine scorn and disapproval many conservative English women are following their American sisters in tinting their finger nails. While the majority of English men still disapprove of lacquered nails a few enthusiastically endorse them.

Proponents of tinted nails point out the practice was followed as long as 3,000 years ago by Chinese mandarins, who gilded their nails to show their exalted rank. Indian potentates painted the nails of their elephants and those of their favorite wives.

Cleopatra and the ladies of Egypt are said to have stained their toenails, although the East Indians, seraglios may not have actually applied paint to their toes, they indulge in pedicures and used perfumed oils on their feet.

Modern women get most of their ideas for preserving their looks from some of the artifices used by the beauties of some more ancient civilization. In fact it seems all ancient beauties had some method of enhancing their natural beauty.

Even Helen of Troy is said to have used a curling stick to fluff out her hair and an ointment to make her skin soft. More recently, Queen Elizabeth was a great patron of the arts of beauty.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 3.

AT LAST a step has been taken to abate one of our greatest civic nuisances—the autograph-pests of who clog traffic, jam gangplanks and drive daft those wonder-stars of the stage and screen who are forced to stick their beautiful noses out of doors when in town.

ALICE HUGHES.

This historic shot was fired when the Queen Mary was about to sail the other day carrying as precious freight the original Charm Boy, Leslie Howard, accompnaied by wife and children, Donald and Leslie Ruth. Forty of the little "sign this, please" monkeys were herded off the skiff and the pier by large, stern coppers, and the Deevane Les got away unruffled. All glory to the Cunard White Star Line for this gallant drive! May it spread to our theaters, night-dives and hotel lobbies, for many of us obscure, hard-working citizens are knocked endwise in the rush for signatures. Why, the adolescent nuisances with the books and pencils now dictate to the world-famous figures. They tell 'em harshly, "Now write, 'Best wishes to Andy'"! The mere name used to satisfy them!

The autograph-collectors have learned all the tricks of their sleazy trade, such as dogging the heels of newspaper cameramen to the sun-deck where the Dream Girl is to be snapped, and then diving at her with levelled pencils.

Brother Howard is headed for England to play, for the screen, one of the most fascinating and romantic figures of our era, the fabulous "T. E."—Lawrence of Arabia, whose leadership of the Arab revolt against the Turks was the outstanding personal drama of the war of 1914-18. Properly done, it should be Leslie's greatest role. Good luck, Les, old crumpet!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Katherine Hepburn. (Hey, Katie, how's about this Howard Hughes thing?) looking very sedate in black, was noted scurrying into my favorite milliner's yesterday. Trousseau hats, Kate, or just a few new numbers for the usual spiritual build-up? Aw, come on! But Kay won't talk.

The clothes-conscious set, with which I mingle as a barely conscious reporter, are 104 per cent agog over the arrival of the young French creator, Marcel Rochas, who is going to open an elegant little branch of his Paris joint right here in town, on East Sixty-seventh street. Whew, are we excited, we! I put my high-school French to work when he came in on the Ile de France, and learned that Marcel has already sunk $75,000 (beaucoup francs) into the decorations of his new Dive de Couture, which is in blue like the one in Paris. He will stay here two months to see the salon safely under way, and then commute. Mark me, sisters, this may mean a whole epidemic of Gotham Branches of great Paris houses, where you may, if morbid, see the wonder workers in the flesh.

What things go on here! Julia Moscowitz's family, numbering five, is just getting over the world's prize tummy-ache, on account of consuming a large mess of pancakes made of plaster of paris! Seems a soda fountain repair man had left it in her son-in-law's candy shop and Mrs. M. took it for flour. They only ate five apiece, but they didn't feel well afterward. There is a great moral lesson in this for us all.

The good work of the late Clarence Day lives after him. Knopf, the writer's publisher, got together enough manuscripts for "Life With Mother," the new Day book, and a delight. It and "Life With Father," as well as "God, and My Father," should be on the book shelf of every sensible American home. Great stuff.

Sally Victro's hat show produced some fine, as well as amusing, new items for the fall head. I think I like best her lovely brimmed felts, they are so perfect with the season's tailored suits. Many of the hats are faced with suede. And Sally's bobbing bonnets from grandma's era—in paisley, sometimes—are good for a chuckle, especially from the irreverent men-folks. Hats are gayer and more abondoned than ever—are a little uppish on the price tag, too. But didn't we Turn That Corner—or did we?

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"IT LOOKS as if prosperity were coming our way after seven lean years," writes Pauline L. "Not that we have delusions of grandeur or anything like that, but at least we see our way clear to buy a new six-room house after having made the best of a very plain four-room rented cottage for several years.

"But here is the problem. I haven't the slightest idea how to have the walls in the new place finished. Shall I have these rooms painted or papered? I've heard that walls shouldn't be finished one way or the other for at least a year. That doesn't appeal to me, but is it taking too much of a chance to have them finished?

"Our living room things are mostly rust and green with slip-covers in a light brown jaspe. The rug is light brown and tan and the furniture is walnut and modern. And that brings up another point—will it be correct to use modern furniture in a Dutch colonial house?

"We haven't any dining furniture, but expect to get some shortly. Should this be walnut because the living room furniture is? It will have to be small in scale because the dining room is small. What about walls? Rugs? Windows?

"I received several differently colored gifts for our bedroom, so I am up a stump about planning it. I have several bedspreads, one orchid moire, another a gold and white woven material, another in blue and white candlewick, and still another in three tones of beige to brown with draperies to match. Which would you use?

First—we'd advise painting the walls, all things considered, and then it ought not to be necessary to wait a year to finish it. For the living room and dining room, we'd have the walls in a pale apple green, then in both rooms curtains of a pinkish apricot ninon made to hang straight and tailored. For the living room we'd have one piece of furniture covered in a patterned fabric, blocked linen, perhaps, and rather modern and gay, but harmonizing with your other colors. In the dining room you could use this fabric for chair seats and backs, then have a plain cedar-colored broadloom rug. Don't be concerned about using modern furniture in a Dutch colonial house. It can be used there quite all right if you don't try to get too bizarre in detail.

It probably would be nicer if you kept the dining room furniture walnut, too. You could get a rather small table that opens out to seat a larger number when needed. And a small cabinet will also be desirable so as not to crowd the room. Chairs with rather low backs will also keep this small room from seeming stuffy. These are easy to find in modern furniture.

As for the bedroom, we'd have the walls done in pale apricot with glass curtains in the same shade. Then get a modern rug with blue and beige in it. You could use either the blue and white candlewick spread or the three-tone net. Add a chair in plain blue.

College Girls Are Delighted By Cunning, Crocheted Caps

By Alice Brooks.

CAMPUS PETS! . . . these cunning, crocheted caps that a college girl's crochet hook can make in a twinkling. Crochet the first of Germantown yarn. It's single crochet so it goes very fast. A band of loop stitch gives it that "smooth" border! Eyes right, to a dashing popcorn stitch cap, done best in a mixture of rayon and woolen yarn. Any school girl will "go" for these . . . they're so economical, so easy to make that she can have a variety to fit her wardrobe. In pattern 5943 you will find complete instructions for making the caps shown; an illustration of them and of all stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Physical Handicaps.

IN THESE ARTICLES on preparing the child for the opening of school, I naturally emphasize the prevention of the contagious diseases. Naturally these constitute the greatest health hazard of any child. No child is born with immunity to them, and in school for the first time he is exposed over and over again, by repeated contacts to them.

So I repeat, the child going to school for the first time should have been—(1) vaccinated against smallpox; (2) vaccinated with toxoid against diphtheria; (3) vaccinated against typhoid fever and possibly against whooping cough and scarlet fever.

But at school the child is exposed to dangers from within and it should be ascertained that he comes to his competitive job, so far as possible, with a healthy and efficient body.

This, as Dr. Allen G. Ireland says, is decidedly the parents' job, and it is the most important way in which he can help the school do a better job. Learning is not as simple as it appears to be. It means work, and effectiveness in work is a matter of fitness, that is, physical and mental preparedness to do one's best. Teachers know how true it is. Too many of them are burdened with classes of unfit children.

The commonest handicaps are decayed teeth, sore gums, adenoids, diseased tonsils, defective vision, impaired hearing and malnutrition. To wait until after school opens frequently means loss of time for the pupil and further postponement by the parent. Consult your physician and dentist now. Have these handicaps to good school work removed before your child gets off to a poor start in the new term.

The Parent-Teacher Association is engaged in many excellent projects for the welfare of children. But in my opinion they are making one contribution that stands out above the others. I refer to the school lunch, whether it is the midsession milk, lunch or the organized hot luncheon at noon.

I mention this now because schools will soon be opening, and it is not too early for the Parent-Teacher Association committees to start planning for the year. And perhaps never before has there been such a great need for good school luncheons. The economic conditions of recent years have deprived hosts of children of physical and emotional security. Food has been less plentiful or it has not been wisely chosen. School boards have been forced to withdraw financial support of the luncheon.

Brown Sugar Joined With Bananas Is Treat

Brown sugar and bananas are joined with butter and other good things to make one of the richest, most mouth-watering desserts you've had in ages. Peel four partially-ripe bananas, cut in half lengthwise and fry for about one minute in a small amount of butter. Place bananas into a well-greased baking dish. Mix one-half cup brown sugar and three-fourths teaspoon salt together and sprinkle onto bananas. Pour one tablespoon lime or lemon juice and then one tablespoon melted butter over sugar. Cover with one-third cup chopped pecan or walnut meats. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) about ten minutes, or until sugar melts and bananas are tender. Serve hot.

BEFORE the start of school, plan one last outing for the children. The menu itself need not take any special work to prepare as there are now on the market so many ready-to-serve dishes that will be appetizing. Instead of making the sandwiches beforehand, the materials for their preparation can be included. They can thus be made to suit individual tastes. Children will enjoy taking part in this short-order meal preparation.

Most of the spreads and "butters" on the market come in glass containers of proper size so they can be packed neatly with the lunch.

If the day is cold or your outing takes you into cool mountain ranges, then try an outdoor prepared meal. There are many who have found nothing so appetizing as fried ham and eggs. For this type of meal, an old skillet and a long handled fork are the only equipment needed. Along most highways there are many ovens built for this type of cookery. Fresh whole tomatoes, pickles, rolls and fresh fruit would complete the menu.

As the water may be untested, take with you a sufficient quantity of beverages. Chocolate milk is a favorite. However, many mothers take ice water in the thermos and include in the lunch boxes cans of pineapple, grapefruit, orange, or tomato juice. Then the fruit juice may be poured into paper cups and served with ice from the thermos.

If you are unable to count on a long trip this week-end, you still can get out and under the sun in a back yard picnic or one in a nearby park. The same system of preparation to order can be carried out at great convenience to a kitchen-ridden housewife. Even the salad can be mixed and served just before the meal. Many different types of canned salads are available. Mixed canned fruits, potato salad and mixed canned vegetables are a few of them.

For desserts, some canned nut breads spread with marmalade, or pan baked loaf cake is good. The cake can be baked the day before the outing.

Canned corned beef, rye bread and butter sandwiches and whole tomato are old favorites that require no cooking. Hard cooked eggs, or spiced peaches can be included for variety.

If you like pre-picnic preparation then include fried chicken. It is still reasonable in price and there is nothing quite so mouth-watering on an outing as crisp, browned chicken eaten with the fingers.

Herb-Salts Seasoning Provide Subtle Flavors

Herb-salts are excellent seasoners and are especially useful when a subtle flavor is preferred to a pronounced one.

Garlic salt gives a delicate overtone to lamb and other meats.

Celery salt comes in handy for soups, stews, etc., especially when celery stalks are not available.

Peaches, Corn, Apples Abound At the Market

A TRIP to the market discloses a new slant on September food availables. The many recent Washington rains have also affected surrounding Virginia and Maryland and have consequently changed the market. Many foods in their prime in past years of drought are about to make their adieu. Chief among these is the ever-popular watermelon supplied to Washington consumers by Virginia and Maryland. Of the 15 varieties at one time or another available we have now principally the Tom Watson left for our use.

Peaches, mainly the Hale and Alberta types, are plentiful and inexpensive, but because of this extreme moisture have a rapid decay and are a constant concern to the merchants. Virginia supplies most of the peaches on sale in the District, while some few come from Pennsylvania.

Corn from Maryland and Virginia is abundant, Country Gentlemen, Golden Bantum and Evergreen being the varieties on sale. Cooking apples are abundant, the Gravensteins, Greenens and Maiden Blush among the principal ones offered. Eating apples are more of a scarcity. Some few dealers are still carrying last year's apples (eight months stored) for baking purposes, as the new cooking apple quickly cooks to a mush when baked.

Tomatoes, green peppers, cucumbers and okra are home-grown. Some tomatoes are shipped from New Jersey and Ohio. Sweet potatoes in wide variety such as Nancy Halls, Yellow Barks and Yams are plentiful and coming into their prime.

California offers for our use Seedless, Red Malagas and Ribier (black) grapes, nectarines, plums, pears, honeydew melons and cholcs carrots. California supplies Iceberg lettuce, cauliflower, peas, cantaloupe (locals being practically finished due to the rains). New York sends the avacado and spinach. The spinach sent is high in price and the bushel is loosely packed as it comes into the Washington market.

Some few winter vegetables are now making their appearance. Broccolli, for the last month supplied by New Jersey, is now being supplemented by the Western crop. Parsnips from New Jersey have made their first appearance, and the popular but soon fading summer squash can now be replaced by the Hubbard variety.

Ham Sandwich for Six.

Stuffed ham takes anybody's ticket as a dinner deluxe. Use two medium-thick slices, put your favorite bread stuffing between, spread with mustard sauce and bake. Before serving, broil grapefruit segments (for ease use the canned Florida grapefruit, simply draining and using as you would fresh) and garnish ham. Serve with applause!

How Is Your Speech?

"The paper says DASH-hunds are the FAYVright show dogs now," she remarks. "They always seem more like caRICKatures than genuWINE dogs to me. I SPOSE it's their superFLUous LENTH, those haRASSed wrinkles, and the PATHoes in their eyes."

What a fascinating person, you'd think, if she said DAHKShunt for dachshund, FAYvorit for favorite, JENyouin for genuine, CARicatures ("a" pronounced as in "sat"). If she were a well-bred talker she'd sound both syllables in supPOSE and pronounce the NG in length. She'd place her accents properly in suPERfious and HARassed. And say PAYthos for pathos.

When she discusses news of the day her words carry no weight because she says FIEnance, AViation, UutiMATum. She'd gain more respect for her opinions if she spoke of fiNANCE ayviATion, and ultiMAYtum.

She's not the sort of person you'd take to a smart restaurant. She'd embarrass you by calling it a RISTrant instead of RESTorant. The chances are she wouldn't know that ahn TRAY is right. For entree, FEElay MEENyon or filet mignon.

To be regarded as an interesting talker, worth listening to, your pronunciation must be correct. Clean up careless speech habits, learn well-bred way of talking from our handy 40-page booklet, WORDS MOST OFTEN MISPRONOUNCED.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Words Most Often Mispronounced," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Making a Rose Jar.

To make a "rose jar" collect petals from several types of roses. (Select those with a heavy perfume.) Sprinkle the leaves over a flat surface in the sun and leave them until they have dried very crisp. Then put them in a jar and put on a cover. The fragrance will keep for several months.

Weather Helps Gauge Choice of Desserts

The calendar and the thermometer and the barometer too, also govern your choice of desserts. Hot and hearty for days of chill, cool and fragile for languid weather is your golden rule. Be an extremist when you gauge the temperature of your desserts—let them be really hot, or honestly cold, not insipid. If your recipe says "chill" or reads "serve hot" please follow the directions.

Hearty desserts include pastry, rich cakes, fritters, rich frozen desserts, shortcakes, batter and fruit puddings. The medium kind include custards, cornstarch desserts, creams and souffles, simple puddings, gelatine molds, simple frozen dainties. And for the lighter ones you may have fruit, plain gelatine and fruit, froths and foams and fluff, water ices and whips and simple ice creams and frozen desserts.

In case of ties, duplicate awards will be made.

7. To qualify for a prize, the contestant is required to accompany each weekly Series of answers with three OLD GOLD yellow package wrappers or three reasonably accurate hand-drawn facsimiles. Either will be equally acceptable. It is not necessary to make a purchase in order to compete. A contestant is privileged to enter more than one complete set of answers, but each entry must be properly qualified and be individually identified as entry "A"; entry "B"; etc. Each entry will be judged as a unit. A contestant is eligible to win one prize only, namely the highest prize won by any individual entry submitted by that contestant.

8. Upon entering this contest and by submission of answers, the contestant accepts these rules as binding and agrees that the decision of P. Lorillard Company in all matters affecting the conduct of the contest, the acceptance of submissions, the making of awards and the measures invoked to insure individual effort in fairness to all contestants, shall be final and conclusive. The P. Lorillard Company will establish an individual file for each contestant, but will not be responsible for submissions or communications unduly delayed or lost in the mail either from or to the contestant. Each entry and submission becomes the property of P. Lorillard Company.

9. Each weekly Series of answers, together with 3 OLD GOLD yellow package wrappers or facsimiles, as specified in Rule No. 7, should be addressed to OLD GOLD CONTEST, P. O. Box 9, Varick Street Station, New York, N. Y.

Excuse for a sizable sidewalk crowd in Washington: Dolly Gann going to a premiere of a movie with a friend from Kansas . . . Fashionable Washington pays at least $2 for its dinner when it can find a table d'hote on the menu, and one false move brings the hunger up around the $5 mark. . . . One timely way to celebrate Labor Day, of course, is by a sitdown strike against picnics.

I got caught in the 4:30 rush downtown yesterday, and it was 45 minutes before I could get within a yodel of a parking station; all the parked cars were emerging . . . Westerners raise an eyebrow at Washington's 65-cent-a-quart ice cream.

* * * *

Inveterate golfers, the story goes, formed the Burning Tree Golf Club so they could golf in peace; they were burned up because the Chevy Chase Club had gone so social.

* * * *

. . . Yes, and if those nine 200-foot super-highways are built, how about making them run downhill in both directions, so a motorist could coast from coast-to-coast?

"—Dolly goes to the movies"

What would happen, I wonder, if one of our eloquent statesmen squared off before a dead microphone, and the radio moguls were to substitute a good phonograph record in the control room, and let the orator orate to his hearts content? A Congressional investigation, no doubt.

* * * *

That handsome statue of Gen. Jackson in Lafayette Square cost $32,000 at pre-Civil War prices . . . I wish someone would begin to turn out good small replicas of the good statues, instead of the clumsy souvenir models.

* * * *

Lifeguards at the Washington swimming pools seem a bit self-conscious since one of them figured so prominently in Mark Childs' novel "Washington Calling." . . . Incidentally, some readers were so certain they recognized some of the characters that they cheerfully predicted a libel suit.

* * * *

One diligent and devoted Congressman obtained Federal jobs for 1,500 of his loyal followers in his district . . . Occasionally a Dixie politico is elected to Congress in the deep South with around 4,000 votes, or about what a defeated candidate for the city council gets in a town of 100,000.

* * * *

Waiters in Washington are great menu-snatchers, even if you want to keep the menu for reference, to find out what you're eating, lest you forget . . . Several feminine leaders are a-twitter about a campaign against the appointment of Senators' widows and Governors' wives to the Senate.

"—Son James into a Warwick?"

Washington's drinking regulations are still a little backwoodsy . . . At 11:30 of a Saturday evening the waiters at gilt-edged rendezvous clear the table of all liquids, including water, to maintain the odor of sanctity; rebellious young men park their highballs between their knees, and urbane men-of-the-world may be seen toting bottles and flasks, as in the bad old days, for out-of-bounds drinking.

* * * *

Maybe it shows how desperate the President's hecklers are, that they pick so heartlessly on Son James . . . The "confidential letters" have built him up into quite a Warwick . . . (Apparently it makes their clients happy to read that sort of stuff.)

* * * *

There are five things the travelers tell you, in your home town, when they hear you're moving to Washington . . . They tell you that Washington is (1) hot, (2) beautiful, (3) fascinating, (4) expensive, and (5) a swell place to raise your kids . . . That gives em a batting average of .800.

* * * *

. . . The obvious explanation of those submarine attacks in the Mediterranean is that Spain and Russia are sinking their own ships to obtain sympathy and publicity. Or wouldn't that seem logical to Berlin and Rome?

Pedestrian Is Injured On Baltimore Highway

Struck by an automobile as he walked on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard at Muirkirk, Md., yesterday, Paul Morowiski, no fixed address, was in critical condition in Garfield Hospital last night.

Maryland State police said William D. Burke, Ambler, Pa., a tourist, was driver of the automobile which struck the man. He was charged with reckless driving.

U. S. Body Lays Illegal Fees to Chicago Group

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday it has issued a complaint accusing the United Buyers Corporation of Chicago, its member companies and eight manufacturers and producers of violating the brokerage section of the Robinson-Patman act.

The commission described United Buyers as a corporation which provides market information and purchases merchandise for about 46 member wholesale grocery concerns.

Respondents Listed.

Six concerns referred to in the complaint as respondent buyers and shareholders in United Buyers are H. P. Lau Co., Lincoln, Nebr.; Bluffton Grocery Co., Bluffton, Ind.; Lima-Kenton Grocery Co., Lima, Ohio; S. Zollinger Co., Piqua, Ohio; Copps Co., Stevens Point, Wisc., and William Edwards Co., Cleveland.

150 Others Involved.

The sellers named, the commission said, "are said to be representative of about 150 sellers engaged in similar practices, but who constitute a class or group too numerous to be brought before the commission in this proceeding."

The commission's announcement added:

"It is alleged that, under the circumstances as set forth in the complaint, United Buyers does not render to the sellers any services in connection with the purchases it makes for its member wholesalers, and upon which purchases brokerage fees and other allowances are paid to it by the sellers."

Discovery Makes Potatoes Valuable Source of Starch

The sweet potato may enter industry as a sourceof starch and, perhaps, of alcohol, it was learned yesterday.

This has come about through the perfection by Dr. E. F. Hopkins, of the Agriculture Department, of a process for removing water from such fleshy vegetables as potatoes, beets and carrots.

Potatoes are dehydrated to permit a commercial plant to operate all the year round in extracting the starch. It previously has been impossible to extract the starch efficiently.

The process will permit storage of fleshy vegetables without loss from rotting or freezing.

It was pointed out that a small plant, operating all the year round could manufacture several million pounds of starch from sweet potatoes. Scientists also said it may be possible to distill alcohol from the juices.

Cab Driver Shoots Himself to Learn What It Feels Like

The shooting was at Arnold's rooming house at 3032 N street northwest. Police said the man left a note but they refused to tell what it said.

Goolrick to Represent City in Road Battle

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 3.—Former State Senator C. O'Conor Goolrick was retained yesterday by the chamber of commerce to represent the city in its fight against the building of a belt-line road around Fredericksburg. At the same time movements were made to engage experts to study the traffic situation here and make recommendations for its improvement.

'White Wings' Will Cost City $166,070 More

40-Hour Week Causes 42 Per Cent Rise in Refuse Budget.

Washington taxpayers will have to pay $166,070 more for the services of its great white wing fleet in the next fiscal year than it will this year, due to the adoption of the 40-hour week and granting of leave to per diem employes of the city refuse division.

This was disclosed yesterday with the submission of a budget of $1,937,918 by William Xanten, superintendent, to the District Commissioners. This represents an increase of $554,188, or 42 per cent, over current appropriations.

Pointing out that wages take up from 85 to 90 per cent of the division's appropriation, Xanten said:

"It is impossible with the present available labor to keep the City of Washington in a state of cleanliness even nearly approaching a proper standard for the Capital of the United States."

Xanten asked $50,000 for snow and ice removal. Heretofore no specific appropriation has been made for this work.

An increase of $87,000 was asked for garbage collectors and others performing the refuse services.

Countersuit Filed By Mrs. Phillips

Requesting $1,000 a month alimony and $2,500 counsel fees, Mrs. E. Lawrence Phillips yesterday filed a countersuit for divorce in Kissimmee, Fla., charging her husband, a Washington theater owner, with extreme cruelty, the Associated Press reported.

Phillips, majority stockholder in the company controlling the Johnny J. Jones amusement enterpises and co-owner of the Stanton and Academy theaters in Washington, recently asked a divorce on grounds of "temperamental impetuosities," which, he specified, made it impossible for him to live with Mrs. Phillips.

Judge Frank A. Smith set a hearing for Wednesday in Orlando, Fla., on Mrs. Phillips' charge.

Blands Court Soon to Bloom As Model Area in Slum Drive

Residents of Bland's court, one of Washington's worst alley areas, sat on rickety steps late yesterday afternoon and tried to visualize changes that soon will take place.

No more ground-floor "halls" leading to crowded back yards. No more firetraps, and no more lamp light. Perhaps bathrooms with complete plumbing facilities, and even electric stoves for some.

First steps toward clearance of the area as planned by the Alley Dwelling Authority came Thursday when Justice Department attorneys filed condemnation proceedings against nearly 50 owners and tenants of the court.

This move revived belief that Bland's court will be one of the first areas tackled in a "wholesale manner" with funds received under provisions of the Wagner bill.

Marked by the Alley Dwelling Authority from the beginning, the court has loomed as a "big problem." When the new apartment house for colored families was opened by the authority recently on nearby W street, John Ihlder, executive officer of the authority, pointed to the Blands area as essential to development of the city's slum clearance program.

Apartment houses similar to that on W street may be erected in the new development, although plans on types of houses are as yet tentative pending approval by President Roosevelt and allocation of funds.

Both row houses and apartment houses have been considered by the authority, but whatever shape the residences take, it is certain a plan for the entire area will be considered.

Some houses in the vicinity may be rehabilitated and fitted into the new program—but only if they can be made to come up to the authority's idea of what minimum living conditions should be.

Suspect in Theft Of $7,000 Jewels Kills Self in Jail

Wanted here for theft of $7,000 in jewelry, Joseph Van Ryke, alias Joseph W. Presburg, 54, committed suicide with poison in a Seattle Wash., jail yesterday, according to an Associated Press dispatch last night.

Van Ryke, or Presourg, was a diamond cutter with an office at Fourteenth and G streets. Last January he fled the city, allegedly taking along $5,000 in diamonds entrusted to him by Mrs. Cornelia P. Mayo, wife of Rear Admiral Henry Mayo, and $2,000 worth turned over to him for cutting by jewelers. His wife and two children went with him.

Two weeks ago, Seattle police arrested Van Ryke. He fought extradition, so Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, had the local grand jury indict him. The papers were sent to the U. S. marshal in Seattle. Yesterday Van Ryke was about to go to Federal court for removal proceedings when he took the fatal draught of poison.

Latvians at home and throughout the world today will celebrate the sixtieth birthday of Dr. Karlis Ulmanis, president and prime minister, but there will be no expensive party at the legation here.

"It is our president's wish," an attache said yesterday, "that no money be squandered to mark his anniversary. A memoral high school is being built in the town where he was born."

180-Day Sentence Delays Man's Plan To Acquire Bride

Lemuel Gillikin's matrimonial plans were disrupted yesterday for 180 days by Police Judge Robert E. Mattingly, who found him guilty of the theft of a suit.

Gillikn caught the fancy of police the other day when he "borrowed" a truck belonging to Frank Jackson, 1500 block of F street northeast, for the purpose of matrimony—in Alexandria.

Death of Woman Mystifies Police

The death of Mrs. Lucille Hamilton, divorced wife of Walton H. Hamilton, of the Social Security Board, puzzled New York authorities yesterday after an autopsy had resulted inconclusively.

Mrs. Hamilton died in a New York hospital Tuesday after she had been found unconscious in her hotel room. She was at first believed to have been suffering from poisoning, possibly from an overdose of a sleeping potion.

First reports said that the woman was the former wife of "William Hamilton." It later was established that she had been married to Walton Hamilton, one-time NRA official, and Yale University professor.

Man Held to Grand Jury In Robbery of Laundry

Frank Parr, the 24-year-old colored bandit who twice held up the same laundry at 110 Florida avenue northeast within three weeks, was held for the grand jury yesterday by Police Judge Robert E. Mattingly.

He was arraigned on the first charge. Police stated that the second charge and a case of attempted criminal assault also would be presented before the jury.

New Requests For Greenbelt Homes Invited

FSA Says They Have Equal Chance With Those on File.

The Farm Security Administration last night announced an intensive drive to find families who wish to live in Greenbelt, the Government's 900-house model community now ready for occupancy at Berwyn, Md.

Registration offices at the project will be open all day Sunday and Labor Day. The administration wishes to dispel the illusion that because 9,000 applications have been received the town's future citizens have been selected. New applicants will be given the same hearing as those who registered six months ago, the administration said and every effort will be made to fill the community with persons from varied business and professions.

Negotiations for transportation for Greenbelt citizens are under way with "two or three local bus companies" and results will be announced early next week, it was thought last night.

President Vetoes Grants to Indians

A Presidential veto has put an end to a plan to distribute a large sum of tribal funds among 2,000 Chippewa Indians and 3,100 Seminoles. Two bills, passed by Congress would have given $25 each to the Chippewas of the Red Lake Reservation in Minnesota and $35 each to a group of Oklahoma Seminoles.

The funds, which are made up of the Indians' earnings, are held in trust by the Government and cannot be spent except by an act of Congress. Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and Commissioner of Indian Affairs John Collier believe that the proposed per capita payments would jeopardize working capital necessary to conservation projects and industries among the Indians.

Ten More Acres Added To Fort Donelson Park

Fort Donelson National Military Park, Tenn., has been enlarged by nearly 10 acres, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes announced yesterday. President Roosevelt has signed the bill for enlarging the park, which now will include the scenes of many significant Civil War events. CCC boys are restoring the fort's ammunition magazines.

Gen. U. S. Grant attacked the fort February 13, 1862. After a three-day siege, Brig. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, commander of the Confederate stronghold, asked for a truce and was told by Grant that only "unconditional and immediate surrender" would be accepted. Buckner agreed.

$1,134,691 Is Asked for Sewer Work

New Lines and Repairs Proposed in City and Suburbs.

Estimated Construction Exceeds Appropriation by $884,671.

An extensive program of sewer construction, both in the city proper and suburban areas, is contemplated for the next fiscal year if estimates submitted yesterday are approved by the District Commissoiners.

Sanitary Engineer John B. Gordon asked a total of $1,134,691, of which $591,336 would be spent on suburban sewer replacements and new lines, and $543,335 on renewing sewers in the city proper.

All estimates for the sewer division aggregate $2,200,851, which is $784,821, or an increase of 55 per cent, over current appropriations.

Twenty-six construction projects are listed for the portion of the city boupded on the north by Florida avenue and including Georgetown. The only large item is $300,000 for replacement of the northeast boundary sewer.

Twenty-three suburban sewer projects are proposed. The largest one calls for $50,000 for the Luson Valley divorcement of sanitary and storm water sewers as a means of curbing stream pollution.

Gordon, in addition, asked $60,000 for continuing construction of the Oxon Run interceptor. The current appropriation is $160,000.

An extra $600, bringing the amount to $12,600, was requested for mosquito control.

For the new sewage treatment plant, Gordon asked $216,000, as as compared with $160,000 this year. The increase, he said, will be due to the full 12-month operation of the plant.

The Water Department proposed construction of two 150,000,000-gallon reservoirs to reduce the cost of supplying water to the center of the city and relieve pressure. The cost cost wiuld be $800,000.

D. W. Holton, superintendent, submitted estimates totalling $2,767,920 as compared with current appropriations of $2,024,470. The increase is 36 per cent. Estimated receipts, he said, will be $3,040,095.

One of the new reservoirs is scheduled for the Soldiers Home grounds. The other would be located in Fort Totten Park, near North Capitol and Gallatin streets.

Who's Sammy Baugh? Asks Marshall.

By Shirley Povich.

George Preston Marshall, who has been taking in the wash at great profit during the past several years, does not propose to be taken in by Slinging Sammy Baugh, the football pitcher who wants more dough from Marshall's Redskins.

And so it was that Marshall, after effervescing yesterday over the talents of Baugh and hinting gently that Baugh's presence would make his Redskins the standout team of the National Pro League, suddenly bethought himself.

POVICH.

Delivering himself a mental kick for forgetting that he was speaking for publication, Marshall abruptly quit singing the praises of Baugh and assumed a different tack. It would never, never do for a club owner who is haggling over salary terms with one of his employes to paint that employe as a guy indispensible to the success of his team. No, indeedy!

* * * * *

So Marshall, artfully reversing himself, began, with his native suaveness, to cast great doubt on the talents of Baugh and generally raise the question of how much the team needed the football pitcher. He said, among other things:

* * * *

"I wouldn't say that Baugh proved himself out there at Chicago the other night when he threw that pass to Tinsley to beat the All-Stars. That might have looked good, but it wasn't a fair test. The game didn't prove anything in my book.

* * * *

"Baugh and those College guys were playing against a bunch of pros who had only two weeks' training. That's not enough. I know the Collegians only had two weeks' practice, too, but they're all young guys and easier to get in shape. Those Pros average four or five years older, perhaps more, and they need two weeks to get in shape. The All-Stars were playing a bunch of tired guys.

* * * *

"And if I were president of the Pro League, I'd have something to say about the size of two squads. It isn't quite fair to give the Collegians a squad of 65 players to thrown in there against the Pros' 25. Especially at that time of the season when neither club has a game under its belt. That makes it tough on those pros."

* * * *

Baugh is no sure bet to be a star in pro football, Marshall was saying, too. The fact is, five other clubs in the National Pro League had a chance to claim the Texas pitcher in the draft and passed him up, Marshall revealed significantly. His Redskins had sixth choice in the lottery involving the college graduates and were the only team among the ten to select Baugh.

* * * *

The Brooklyn Dodgers, who had first choice, picked Ed Goddard, of Washington State, and Pittsburgh took Mike Basrak, Duquesne's center. The Philadelphia Eagles came up with Sam Francis and the Chicago Cardinals selected Louisiana's end, Gaynel Tinsley. Ed Widseth, Minnesota's tackle, was the choice of the New York Giants.

* * * *

So I wouldn't say Baugh was red-hot," pointed out Marshall, who by this time was well aware that it would never do to lay bare the fellow's importance to the Redskins. "Five other clubs passed him up. That ought to make him come down in his demands. He isn't that good."

* * * *

But it was difficult for the Redskins' owner to completely hide his joy at the fact that the Redckins did come up with Baugh in the draft. Even at the expense of tipping his hand. Marshall found himself saying nice things about the big Texan who is balking now at the terms of the contract he signed.

* * * *

"Ya know, neither Coach Flaherty nor myself ever saw Baugh play when we signed him and offered him one of the highest figures any pro star in the league is getting. But if he was half as good as our scouts said he was, he must have been something down there with T. C. U. All I want to see is that guy with a football in his hands throwing it to some of our guys who can really catch passes. We'll be hot."

* * * *

Marshall said he didn't know what he'd do if Baugh absolutely refused to join up with the Redskins. Only one thing he knew for certain —he'd take legal action to prevent Baugh playing with any other football team and he might even go so far as to enjoin Baugh from taking a coaching job.

"But where would Baugh get a coaching job that would pay him anywhere near what he could get from the Redskins? Hell, what we're offering him is more than his own coach got paid down at Texas Christian University. The T. C. U. coach gets $4,500, which is better than an average coaching salary. Anyway, whoever told Baugh he is a coach? We know he can play football. He'd better stick to playing."

Max to Get 20 Per Cent Of the Gate

German Gets His Chance Against Champion Next June.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Sept. 3.—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion, signed a contract today for a title fight with Joe Louis next June. The exact date and the place will be settled later by the principals and Promoter Mike Jacobs.

The German finally came to terms with boxing's new "Tex Rickard," following an all-day conference at a downtown hotel.

Jacobs announced that Schmeling, who had been holding out for 30 per cent of the gate, had finally accepted 20 per cent. Jacobs originally insisted that the German take the usual challenger's share of 12½ per cent.

The promoter also announced that the German had given him a 1½-year contract on his services after the title match. Jacobs said he will control the German's affairs until September, 1939. Thus the wiley Jacobs has brought into his fold the last of the great heavyweight holdouts. He now controls the big-time boxing industry more than any other previous ruler.

Louis Gets 37½ Per Cent.

Louis, who won the title from Jimmy Bradock in June and successfully defended it in record time against Tommy Farr, the iron-jawed Welshman, Monday night, will get the usual champion's share of 37½ per cent.

Although none of Louis' actual retinue was at the five-hour session, it is understood that anything Jacobs says is all right with Roxborough and Black, Louis' nominal managers. The Hippodrome promoter, however, virtually controls the Negro champion's affairs.

Schmeling knocked out Louis in June, 1936, in 12 rounds and has been seeking a title bout ever since. Subsequently Louis won the heavyweight crown from James J. Braddock, who withdrew from a contract to fight Schmeling.

Following the failure of Louis, last Monday night, to do better than outpoint Tommy Farr in his first title defense, popular demands for the Negro to meet Schmeling again, as a means of settling title arguments, have been heard on all sides.

Schmeling was given the biggest ovation of any former champion at last Monday night's festivities, a fact which more than any other must have decided Promoter Jacobs' mind about the return match. That Yankee Stadium will be the site of the title match was almost universally considered today following Monday night's' demonstration.

Jacobs' fear of an anti-Nazi boycott and its subsequent effect on the gate of a title match between the German and Louis was said to be one of the things that kept the match from actually being made. The other stumbling block was Maxie's demand for 30 per cent of the gate, a little matter which was ironed out today.

Jacobs did not reveal today just what would happen to the signed match between Farr and Louis supposedly set for October. Jacobs announced this match on Tuesday. Yesterday he announced a match between Maxie Baer and Jimmy Braddock for next month. It was supposed that the Baer-Braddock match would open up the Hippodrome, Jacobs' renovated Sixth avenue house, and that the Farr-Schmeling bout would open up the Garden, which is now under Jacobs' management.

Schmeling Returns Hme.

Maxie will sail for Germany tomorrow night on the Bremen. He may return to the United States to fight one tune-up match for Mike Jacobs before June, or he may engage in a tune-up fight in Germany. Under his contract, Max is allowed to do either. But if he boxes in Germany he is not permitted to meet Tommy Farr, Bob Pastor, Jim Braddock or either of the brothers Baer, Maxie and Buddie.

Louis is not bound to refrain from fighting or defending his title meanwhile. But if he should lose the title, Promoter Jacobs agrees in the contract that Schmeling will meet the new champion in June and receive 35 per cent of the gate instead of 20.

Schmeling gave credit to the American public and the sports writers for the ultimate successful conclusion of his campaign for a title bout. At the same time he denied firmly he had any intention of taking the title back to Germany and "sitting on it" if he should win.

"I feel the American press and public in their attitude toward me had much to do with bringing me the chance to fight Louis," Max said. "The sports writers showed they believed I was entitled to fight Louis and that had a lot to do with making the negotiations successful.

"I have no intention of going into retirement. Why should I? I'm still a young man; I like to fight and I'll be willing to defend the title against any contender."

Griffs Start Scoring Early on Ruffing

By Shirley Povich.

His cap slightly askew, a chaw of tobacco in his mouth and the figure he cut otherwise meeting most of the requirements of the arrogant storybook rookie, Young Kendall Chase threw nine innings of dismay at the Yankees yesterday.

The curly-haired left-hander, who is only two years off his milkman's route in upper New York State, showed a fine disregard for the power in the Yankees' bats, held 'em to seven hits, outpitched big Charley Ruffing, and ushered the Nats to a 4-2 victory.

He had what it took to beat the Yankees—a left-handed curve that he mixed with a better than tolerable fast ball and the cheers of the 10,000 Ladies Day fans fell pleasantly on the ears of the kid who was holding such as Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig hitless all afternoon.

The suspicion is that it was no fluke performance by young Chase, who has been tagging along with the Nats for two years now because Manager Bucky Harris scented something of the diamond in the rough in him. For his seven-hit feat of yesterday followed on the heels of a five-hit effort against the Cleveland Indians.

Put Pressure on Yanks.

Sure, he walked a half dozen yesterday and there were times yesterday when he was in trouble, but he was unrelenting with that speed of his and in the late innings when his slender lead was in jeopardy he merely reared back and got the Yankees out.

The Yanks had the tying run on base in the eighth and again in the ninth, but Chase left em holding the bags. He walked DiMaggio and Gehrig in the eighth with none out, and Jake Powell sacrificed 'em along but in this crisis the Yanks could produce only one run (on Hoag's fly) because Glenn was an easy third out.

And in the ninth when the Yanks threatened to do something about Chase's 4-2 lead and Syd Cohen was warming up feverishly in the Washington bull pen, the rookie came through unscathed. Heffner had beaten out an infield hit to Travis and, with one out, Crosetti singled sharply to center, which brought dangerous Red Rolfe to bat. Chase disposed of Rolfe on a tame fly to Jimmy Wasdell in rightfield.

Pitches to DiMaggio.

But he was not yet over the hump. For their, waving a sinister club in the batter's box was Joe DiMaggio, who could spoil the whole thing with his thirty-ninth home run of the season. And when Chase had a count of three balls and one strike on DiMaggio, he looked at the bench for instructions. Manager Harris told him to pitch to DiMaggio, what with Gehrig next up. And pitch he did. He flung a fast ball past DiMaggio's swinging bat and then audaciously threw a curve that DiMaggio could only beat into the dirt in Travis' direction and Chase had his ball game.

Washington cuffed Ruffing around for 11 hits and at the end of the third inning had a 3-1 lead. Ruffing was responsible personally for that first-inning run. He walked Almada and Travis and then dropped Gehrig's throw to first base when Stone beat out an infield hit. Almada scored on the muff.

The run the Yanks scored off Chase in the second was a tainted affair, inspired by a wild pitch. Jake Powell replied to the boos that greeted him by banging a single to center and went to second unmolested when Chase threw his first pitch to Glenn into the dirt past Ferrell. Glenn singled to center to drive Powell home.

The Nats bounced right back at Ruffing in their half of the inning to take a 2-1 lead when Rick Ferrell singled to left and romped all the way home by permission of Mel Almada's two-bagger against the base of the rightfield wall. And in the third they made it 3-1 when Johnny Stone led off with a double to left and scored from third while Myer was beating out a hit to Heffner.

After that Yankee run in the eighth cut Chase's lead to 3-2, the rookie personally upped it to 4-2 when, after Rick Ferrell bashed a two-bagger to left, he slammed a hard single past Rolfe to bring his catcher romping home. Chase was pretty good yesterday.

Tigers Take 4-3 Victory Over Chisox

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 3.—The Detroit Tigers increased their second-place lead over Chicago today by defeating the White Sox, 4 to 3, in the first game of a series here.

Elden Auker, Tiger submarine ball hurler, who won his twelfth victory of the season, received better support afield than did Vernon Kennedy, who went the route for Chicago. The Detroit fielders had the high total of 21 assists for the game.

Gerald Walker, Detroit lead-off man, hit his seventeenth home run of the season in the first inning, and Kennedy tied the score in the third, hitting his second circuit blow of the year with bases empty. Charlie Gehringer, the league's leading batsman, had a perfect day at the plate with three singles in as many official times at bat.

Dodgers Beat Giants, 15 to 7, in Batting Bee

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 3.—By way of showing that a Dodger, like an elephant, never forgets, the Brooklyn baseball beauties belted their perennial feudists, the Giants, 15 to 7, today and cut the New Yorkers' National League lead to half a game.

Led by a pair of long-range wallopers in Jimmy Bucher and Babe (the Blimp) Phelps, the daffy Dodgers drubbed three pitchers for 18 hits, sewed up the game as early as the fifth inning, and were never in trouble despite a giant comeback which netted seven runs in the last three frames.

Although the Giants collected a total of 15 hits, they were unable to do any consistent clouting until the seventh. Waite Hoyt, who opened for the Dodgers and received credit for the victory, held them to four hits through the first six innings, and then, with a shutout in sight, was clubbed out under a five-run barrage in the seventh. Old Jim Lindsey finished up and got into difficulty only in the ninth, when Hank Leiber's homer accounted for the other two Giant runs.

Bucher and Phelps were the chief Brooklyn needlers. Each collected five hits in six times at bat. Bucher belted a homer with the bases loaded, a triple and three singles and drove in five runs, and Phelps whacked a triple, double and a trio of singles.

The Brooklyns opened with a two-run rally on four hits in the first frame, followed it up with four more in the fourth on Bucher's homer and finished Melton with a two-run spree in the fifth.

Aside from the Dodgers' roundhouse walloping, the game was featured by Manager Burleigh Grimes' eighth banishment of the season. He objected to an umpire's decision in the first frame, and promptly objected himself right out of the game.

Indians Trim The Browns By 15-3 Score

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Sept. 3.—Until the eighth inning today, the Browns offered some opposition to the Cleveland Indians. Then the cellar dwellers of the American League cracked, the Indians scored 9 and won, 15 to 3.

That inning started with Hal Trosky being hit by a ball pitched by Elon Hogsett, who left the game after Julius Solters singled and Bruce Campbell walked, filling the bases. Then the Browns' fielders bobbled and Relief Pitcher Baecht was ineffective. Solters hit a home run with two men ahead of him his second time up in the inning before Campbell flied to Beau Bell to end the Browns' agony.

Johnny Allen, of Cleveland, had one wild inning, the fifth, when he issued three consecutive walks. But no runs scored. The victory was his ninth of the season against no defeats.

Buxby Wins Easily From Teuton Star

By Bill Boni.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 3. A combination of oppressive American heat, unfortunate playing conditions and a comparative "unknown" who refused to be impressed by an international reputation today robbed the Men's National Singles championship of one of its most attractive performers, as 32 survivors of a star-studded starting field of 100 advanced by devious methods into the third round.

The man for whom that combination proved too much was Henner Henkel, No. 2 ranking star of Germany and the foreign seeded list, and, at 21, one of Europe's best court campaigners.

Other Stars Climb.

All of the other front-rankers came through nobly. Don Budge, Wimbledon champion and Davis Cup ace from Oakland, Calif., and domestic favorite for the title won last year by Fred Perry, romped through his first match in straight sets, as did Von Cramm, the man most likely to clash with him in the final round.

Bobby Riggs, Frankie Parker and Bitsy Grant, next ranking Americans, and Jiro Yamagishi, of Japan; Charles Edgar Hare, of England, and Yvon Petra, of France, placed behind Henkel in the foreign seeded list, also came out on top.

In the women's competition there was only one upset even slightly comparable to the elimination of Henkel. That was the first-round defeat—for the second year in a row—of petite Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan. The Boston brunette was beaten in the day's first stadium match, 12—10, 0—6, 7—5, by Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, veteran New York internationalist who gained her highest ranking, No. 4, three years ago, and last year was ranked thirteenth to her victim's No. 3—a position which Mrs. Fabyan held in the United States seedings.

Polish Girl Wins.

Despite his ranking, Henkel was shoved out on a field court for his match, and found himself sandwiched between two others, with the result that ball boys from the adjoining courts frequently got under foot. In addition the German had dropped from 180 pounds to 162 since his arrival; had been unable to sleep the last three nights, and was strictly on edge.

The latter was not alone on the sidelines, though. He was joined there by Hideo Nishimura, of Japan; Jacques Brugnon, of France, and Clarence M. Jones, of England, who held the sixth, seventh and eighth spots on the foreign seeded list. Nishimura's defeat by Sidney Wood, beaten finalist in 1935, and that of Jones by young Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C., occasioned no great surprise, but Brugnon's straight-set elimination by George Toley, a complete unknown from Los Angeles, definitely ranked with the upsets.

Riggs probably had a hard task, as he was drawn against Gene Mako, Budge's doubles partner. Mako started off like the best singles player in the field to win the first set at 6—2, but lost the next three at 6—3, 6—4, 7—5, after missing a chance to square the match in the ninth game of the fourth, which was deuced five times.

Of the other Americans, Grant, Joe Hunt, No. 5, and Johnny McDiarmid, No. 7, won in straight sets; McDiarmid defeated Dooley Mitchel of Washington; Parker was carried to four by seasoned Frank Bowden, of New York; Hal Surface, No. 6, had the easiest time of all, advancing on a default, and Johnny Van Ryn, No. 8, had the hardest, finally pulling out a five-setter from Julius Heldman, 1936 National junior champion.

Welsh Bows.

Two of the seeded women went out with Mrs. Fabyan. One was eighth-ranking Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., beaten, 6—1, 7—5, by English Weightman Cupper Evelyn Dearman, the other Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, No. 6 on the foreign list, who lost to Joan Ingram, Miss Dearman's doubles partner, 6—3, 0—6, 6—4.

Budge routed the Princeton University captain, Bill Winslow, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3; Von Cramm eliminated Alfred Jarvis, who last year drew Perry in his first match, 6—1, 6—4, 6—2; Miss Jedrzekowska disposed of Evangeline McLennan, 6—2, 6—1, and Miss Jacobs won from Helen Bernhard by the same scores. Mary Cootes, of Alexandria, Va., was eliminated by Patricia Henry, of Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—4.

Picard Breaks Course Mark to Lead in $5,000 Hershey Open

By the Associated Press.

Hershey, Pa., Sept. 3.—Tall, handsome Henry Picard, home town pro, turned the $5,000 Hershey Golf Open into a one-man show today. He set a new course record of 65, 8 under par, to take the lead at the half-way mark of the four-day tournament. His 36-hole total of 135 was eleven under par.

Picard's amazing round, shattering the previous record of 67, gave him a 3 and 4 stroke lead, respectively, over Ralph Guldahl, of Chicago, National Open champion, and Ray Mangrum, of Dayton, Ohio, who tied for the lead at the end of the first round.

By equalling the old course record, shared by Picard, Guldahl, Mangrum and Jimmy Hines, of Garden City, L. I., Guldahl added a two-under-par 71 to his opening 67 for 138. Mangrum carded a 72 for 139.

These three were far ahead of the field. Six strokes bhind Mangrum was Wiffy Cox, of Washington, D. C., who got a par 73 for 145. Ben Hogan, of Fort Worth Tex.; Sam Byrd, of Philadelphia, and Andy Gibson, of Baltimore, were tied at 146, while Johnny Revolta, of Chicago; Gene Sarazen, of Brookfield Center, Conn.; Sam Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.; Ted Luther, of Girard, Ohio, and Cliff Spencer, of Washington, D. C., were deadlocked at 147.

Picard's long drives helped him on his record-shattering round. After he got an eagle three on the 565-yard third, word spread rapidly that the Ryder Cup star was having an extra good day.

Milton S. Hershey, who built this model community near Harrisburg, Pa., joined the crowd at the eighteenth, and joined in the cheers that followed Picard's par three on the last green.

Picard was out in 30, 6 under par, and a new record for the first nine holes. He slammed home birdies on the first, fifth, sixth and ninth, in addition to his third-green eagle to smash the former record of 32 held by Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., and Ray Mangrum.

He added a fifth birdie on the 522-yard eighteenth and got a sixth on the seventeenth by sinking a 14-foot putt.

He was in trouble only on the sixteenth. His second shot landed in a trap. He holed out nicely with a No. 6 iron, for a par 4.

Billy Haverstick, jr., of Lancaster, Pa., and Francis Ford, of Charleston, S. C., were the leading amateurs.

Players with scores of 158 or better qualified for the third and fourth rounds tomorrow and Sunday.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Twenty-six young athletes, a thermometer showing 92 degrees, and an 85-pound watermelon shared the spotlight yesterday at Brookland, where Catholic University's 1937 football squad dug in for a three-week seige of a malady known to the trade as preseason training.

Head Coach "Dutch" Bergman put the boys through an hour's workout, at the end of which they were unanimously in favor of going to work on the melon, a gift of Postmaster General James A. Farley. This plan was vetoed, however, and dividends will not be declared until after today's practice.

Hardest worker yesterday was Leo Katalinas, the baby blimp, who will be moored to left tackle this season, and who shed 12 of his 245 pounds. Leo's goal is a nifty 220 by opening day, a weight he anticipates no trouble making. Eddie La Fond, who relishes hot days and heavy workouts, directed the drill and made it as tough as usual.

Four men are still missing from the ranks, but one Charley Munhall, halfback, is expected today. Others due in camp early next week are Fred Rogers, end; Frank Krawczel, back, and Pete Osinski, center.

At Maryland Frank Dobson already is outlining plays for his boys, who are in excellent condition and almost ready for the rough stuff. Dobson intends to buckle down to serious work next week, weather permitting.

Georgetown and George Washington are busy packing trunks and checking equipment prepartory to marching off to camp Monday and Tuesday, respectively. The Hoyas' baggage was shipped to Old Point Comfort last night, and George Washington's will be vanned to Camp Letts tomorrow.

Two Tie at 198 For National Skeet Honors

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 3.—Odis Walding, Los Angeles dry cleaning plant owner, and Dr. C. W. Scranton, East Orange, N. J., surgeon, shared the lead with identical scores of 198 as the three-day 250-target all-gauge event of the third National Skeet Championships reached the 200-target mark tonight.

The final 50 targets will be fired tomorrow, and at least ten gunners are conceded good chances of winning the championship that was relinquished today by 15-year-old Richard Shaughnessy, of Dedham, Mass. Shaughnessy, who won the all-gauge and junior crowns a year ago, lost his chance to take a title this year when he broke only 95 targets today. His 193 total placed him five targets behind the leaders.

Walding, who shot 100 on the first day to share the lead with Don Searls, of South Lyon, Mich., and Frank R. Kelly, of West Orange, N. J., scored a 98 today. Dr. Scranton equaled his 99 targets of yesterday.

Billows Defeats Holt In Western Golf Play

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 3.—A couple of high school buddies, recently reunited by their quest for golf laurels, led the way into the semifinals of the Western amateur tournament here today.

Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who did his prep schooling in Racine, Wis., defeated Bill Holt, of Syracuse, N. Y., 2 and 1, in this afternoon's quarter-finals.

Wilford Werhle, of Racine, who came West with Billows and meets him in the 36-hole semifinals tomorrow, ran into a tartar in Harry Todd, Dallas, but finally won on the twentieth, 1 up.

Chuck Kocsis, Detroit's former national intercollegiate titlist, and John Burke, Newport, R. I., will meet in the other semifinal.

Kocsis, three-time Big Ten champion, downed Roger Kelly, of Los Angeles, in one of the hardest struggles of the day, one up. Kelly, medalist in the national amateur and California State champion, lost his chance to square the match on the eighteenth when his approach hit the green and bounded over through the crowd.

Kocsis sank a 40-foot putt on the ninth to go 1 up. They were square going past the fifteenth but Kocsis took the sixteenth when Kelly drove into the rough and took 3 to reach the green.

Burke edged out young Davie Davis, of Tyler, Tex., 1 up. They teed off even on the last hole but Davis caught a trap on his second. He came out 10 feet short of the pin, while Burke laid his first putt stiff. Davis' putt rimmed the cup and Burke sunk his for par 4.

Billows, runner-up to Johnny Goodman in last week's National Amateur championship, had little difficulty eliminating Holt. He had "Trailer Bill" 4 down at the turn as Holt's tee shots went awry.

Wehrle defeated Todd with a birdie 4 on the twentieth, when the Texan's tee shot barely cleared a trap and went into the rough. Todd's second was long and to the right, while Wehrle was on the edge of the green. Wehrle holed out in 2 and Todd's third was short. Each had 4's on the eighteenth and birdie 4's, on the nineteenth.

Three Rookies Report; Case Rejects Offer

Wasdell, Lanahan, Phebus Arrive; Wasdell Plays Rightfield.

George Case, star outfielder of the Nats' Trenton team, who was scheduled to be in the Washington line-up yesterday, walked out of President Clark Griffith's office after his demands for a bonus were rejected.

Case, a strapping .330 hitter who is regarded as one of the stars of the N. Y. P. A. League, refused to sign a Washington contract unless paid a $1,200 bonus by Griffith. Later he shaved his demands to $1,000, but Griffith was adamant.

"Do you know the way back to Trenton," Griffith asked the lad who had come with his uncle to negotiate with Griffith.

"Yes, sir," Said Case.

"Well, then, you'd better head back there, because I'm not giving you a penny bonus," said Griffith. Whereat, Case left.

Consequently, Manager Bucky Harris was forced to play First Baseman Jimmy Wasdell, from Chattanooga, in the Nats' outfield yesterday. Wasdell, new to the position, turned in an acceptable exhibition in the outfield with the exception of one double-play throw that he missed. He went hitless in four times at bat, striking out twice. In the pregame batting practice, Wasdell, a pull hitter, had peppered the right-field fence. The Nats paid Minneapolis $25,000 for Wasdell last winter.

The other rookies to join the Nats were Pitchers Dick Lanahan and Ray Phebus, recalled from Chattanooga. Both formerly had trials with the Washington club.

Cards Back Marshall in Baugh Fuss

Rickey Expects Baugh to Live Up to Redskin Contract.

Marshall yesterday advised Baugh, who repudiated his football contract with the Redskins and signed to play baseball with the Cardinals, that the St. Louis team expects Baugh to live up to his Redskin contract.

Carr Speaks.

"Through Joe Carr, president of the National Football League, Branch Rickey, of the St. Louis Cardinals, makes the following statement: 'The St. Louis Cardinals expect Baugh to live up to his contract with the Washington Redskins just the same as they expect him to live up to his contract with baseball. They have no objection to his playing professional football. The St. Louis Cardinals do not attempt to violate contracts or interfere in other contracts made by other parties.'

"Any statement other than this issued to the press is untrue," Marshall continued in his telegram to Baugh. "Expect you here Tuesday afternoon."

Thus Marshall has gained a valuable point in his contract war with Baugh, who threatened to turn his back on pro football for what he believed to be a more lucrative career in professional baseball with the Cardinals.

Marshall Confident.

The Cardinals' statement will bring Baugh to heel, Marshall confidently predicted yesterday.

Baugh has Marshall's original permission to play in the All-Star game at Dallas on Monday night, but if he refuses to report within a reasonable time thereafter, he will be placed on the league's suspended list, Marshall said.

If Baugh ignores his contract with the Redskins, legal steps will be taken to enjoin him from playing football with any other team, according to Marshall.

Don Irwin, former Colgate star, sprained his ankle in yesterday's Redskins' practice and will be out for at least a week. Riley Smith stood out in yesterday's place-kicking session. Another good-sized crowd was on hand to watch the pros practice.

Elizabeth Ryan Wins 100 Meter Swim Title

By the Associated Press.

Miss Ryan, a member of last year's Olympic relay team, outdistanced a great field to win the 1937 championship. She touched the finish line at Fleishhacker Pool 1 foot ahead of the defending titleholder, Toni Redfern, Virginia schoolgirl, and Claudia Eckert, of Chicago.

Miss Redfern and Miss Eckert finished in a dead heat for second position. Doris Brennan, of Olneyville, R. I., was fourth.

Miss Ryan's time was considerably slower than the world record of 1:04.6 set by Willi Ben Ouden, of Holland, in 1936. The American record is 1:06.8 by Helene Madison, of Seattle, in 1932.

Adolph Keifer, of Chicago, bettered the world record for 100 yards in an exhibition of his back-stroke specialty over the long course. His time was 1 minute and 3-10 second. The American record is 1:03, by Albert Vande Weghe, of Newark, ——8, 1935.

Keifer also holds the 20-yard and short course back-stroke records for 100 yards.

Mrs. Ludewig White Sulphur Golf Victim

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 3.—Washington's last representative in Mason-Dixon golf was eliminated this morning in final round of third flight consolation. Mrs. Joseph Ludewig, of Alexandria, battled hard but in vain and lost to Mrs. V. V. Nelson, of Columbus, Ohio, one up on the eighteenth green. Dropping the seventeenth after the match had see-sawed back and forth, she was unable to get better than a half on the eighteenth with a conventional 3.

Guilfoil and Traung qualified to meet each other in 36-hole final tomorrow by taking their opponents each 2 and 1 in great fights. Guilfoil won brilliant victory over Mary Morrison, who gave her fight all the way. After being 3 down at fifth, Morrison braced and made turn only one hole down. Taking then losing a hole after turn, Morrison dropped sixteenth when Guilfoil's second shot left her short and pitch stopped within 3 inches. Morrison found herself stymied when she putted back from long pitch to far side. Playing safe, Guilfoil was glad to halve seventeenth and win match there.

Traung beat down repeated attempts of Bernice Wall and came to seventeenth winner by 2 and 1. One down at turn after Wall had shot eagle at 2, birdies at 3 and 7 and dropped third and eighth Traung braced and raced ahead to take lead. The match was evened at fourteenth when Wall laid second shot for gimme put and birdie 3, then went to Traung's advantage on next hole. She added another hole at the sixteenth with eagle and was content to have the seventeenth to end match.

Bob Morris Wins Junior Links Title

Bob Morris, tow-headed public links star, caught up with the city municipal junior championship yesterday by defeating 16-year-old Bill Leapley, 6 and 4, in the 36-hole finals at East Potomac.

Morris, runner-up to Andy Oliveri for the title last year, took an early lead, and although it was up and down throughout the match, his junior opponent could never overcome the advantage.

The eventual winner was 5 up at the ninth as he went out in his best nine of the day. It was only 3 at the end of the morning round, but he boosted it to 4 up at the twenty-seventh and lost little time in clinching the match on the final nine.

Pageantry Wins Race At Marlboro

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro Race Track, Sept. 3.—Pageantry, 4-year-old Hourless gelding, running in the silks of Mrs. G. L. Hamilton, drove to the finish line to win the feature race of today's Prince Georges County program. With Apprentice Jockey George McMullen handling the reins, Pageantry had a half length the better of Darling Pat, one that finished two and a half lengths ahead of Dolly Tour, a 50-1 shot.

Pageantry's triumph, at a $10.30 mutuel, was the third saddle success of the afternoon for young McMullen, who previously had made the daily double a sort of personal proposition. He rode Broken Rhythm to a win in the first race and then came back to put the finishing touches on the twin bet by piloting Pegadette to the wire ahead of the field in the third race. Those who held the "6 and 5" combination collected a $37.30 double.

One of the largest weekday crowds of the meeting, some 5,000 fans, witnessed the racing conducted under ideal conditions.

Tom's Boy was first to show in front in the feature. He soon tired and was supplanted by Lady Buck. Pageantry was under wraps and close up. As the field approached the stretch, McMullen put Pageantry to a drive and the gelding responded by going to the front. However, Darling Pat had gathered momentum and came charging through the stretch, but Pageantry, with McMullen's urging, held on to the finish.

Broken Rhythm caused a mild upset by winning the first event fashioned for juveniles. The filly, with George McMullen in the saddle, forged to the finish line a half length in advance of Never Cease, the favorite, which had a margin of three lengths on Blue Prelude. The last named ran out at the first turn, carrying Broken Rhythm and Never Cease with her. However, the others in the field did not have speed enough to take advantage of the mishap. Broken Rhythm paid $12.90.

U.S. Opens War On Gambling in Farm Products

By the Associated Press.

A Federal survey began yesterday to determine whether large speculators are trying illegally to manipulate prices of farm products. Federal officials suspect, it was indicated, that the commodity exchange act is being violated.

Dr. J. W. T. Duvel, chief of the commodity exchange administration, directed 900 commission firms to report on every commodity account, small or large, in which trading this year was controlled by any person other than the owner.

The check upon trading in wheat, corn, cotton and other farm products covered by the act comes at a time when prices of these commodities have been dropping. Duvel said the check-up was not inspired by these declines.

Heavy Punishment.

Instead, he said, officials here have "reason to believe" that some large traders are not reporting all transactions they control. He said this violation could mean a fine of $10,000, a year's imprisonment, or both.

Sometimes trading under many different names may "trace back to a single source" that is not making the required reports, Duvel said. He added:

"When experienced operators endeavor to build up trading power to influence commodity futures prices and fail to report their entire transactions as required by law, they are violating the commodity exchange act, are guilty of a criminal offense and will be prosecuted."

With large quantities of wheat, corn, cotton and other crops moving to market, Duvel said officials are alert to prevent any "concerted drive by speculators to manipulate prices."

Export Firm Buys 2,500 Bantam Cars

New York, Sept. 3 (AP). — The American Bantam Car Co., which purchased the plant of the defunct Austin Co. at Butler, Pa., signed its first contract today with the American Steel Export Co., calling for an initial purchase of 2,500 cars and the eventual delivery of 40,000 cars.

R. S. Evans, of Atlanta, Ga., president of the Bantam Co., said the Butler Plant would begin production of the new "Bantam 60" late this month or early in October. The plant's present capacity is 44,000 cars a year and the contract with the export company calls for delivery of one out of every four units.

Railway Express Takes Over Gen. Air

New York, Sept. 3.—Railway Express Agency, Inc., announces that effective today the business of General Air Express, operating over the lines of Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., will become part of the air express division of Railway Express.

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—Cotton lost part of Thursday's rallies today under Southern selling and liquidation. December sold off from 9.28 to 9.11 and closed at 9.14, with final prices 13 to 20 points net lower.

The market opened 3 to 7 points lower in the face of steady cables and foreign buying. Larger offerings from the South and selling through commission houses on a belief the rally had weakened the technical position were factors. Improving weather conditions in the South also influenced sentiment.

Additional private crop reports were issued pointing to increases over last month, although the gains were smaller than some of the earlier reports. Trading was less active.

Philadelphia to Cut Reserve Rate to 1½%

The Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank will cut its discount rate from 2 to 1½ per cent tomorrow, the Federal Reserve Board said yesterday.

Wheat Prices Sag as Buying Power Fades

Early Advance Is Wiped Out as Traders Lose Interest.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—A dull preholiday trade kept wheat prices within a narrow rut today and the finish was fractionally lower. The market digested bullish and bearish trade news quietly. Buying power was at a low ebb but so, too, was selling pressure.

At the start prices climbed cautiously a maximum of three-quarters cent on buying associated to some extent with increasing concern over the foreign political situation and on good demand for actual wheat at most markets. Afterward, bulls lost interest and the market developed softness which carried values down 1¼ cents below the early highs at one stage.

Wheat closed ¼@¾ lower compared with yesterday's finish, September 1.05⅛@1.05¼, December 1.07⅛@1.07¼, May 1.09⅝@1.09¾; corn was ¼ down to ⅛ up, September 96@96⅛, December 62⅞@63, May 64¾; oats ⅛ off to ⅛ up, September 29⅛; rye ⅛ up, September 81⅛; lard 10 to 18 cents down.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Recover as Trading Diminishes; U. S. Bonds, Wheat and Cotton Lower.

New York, Sept. 3.—Stocks recovered moderately in trading volume which was only about half that of yesterday, but Government bonds felt easier on approaching new loans. Commodities were uncertain. Sugar had a setback. Cotton lost the dollar a bale it gained yesterday. December wheat closed ⅝ of a cent lower at 107¼ cents a bushel.

A little more attention than usual was paid to the weekly banking figures, in view of the current reduction of Federal Reserve Bank discount rates in an effort to return to inflation or "reflation" as a reversal of certain recent deflationary trends. Seasonal influences at work in the money market led to some expansion in loans and discounts during the week, but it would be hasty to assume that the discount rate strategy is proving to be successful in turning the Government bond selling movement.

Loans Increase.

Member banks increased their borrowings at the Federal Reserve banks this week, most of the rise taking place in New York, where it was hoped that it would occur, since most of the bond selling had been done here. Although the increase was large in percentage, actually it amounted to only $5,000,000, less than "other" Federal Reserve Bank credit put to use, the total of all that credit rising by $14,000,000 to a figure $116,000,000 higher than a year ago.

On other Federal Reserve system items the changes were seasonal and normal. Gold stock jumped another $26,000,000 and currency in circulation rose $37,000,000. Incoming gold was sterilized and excess reserves of the banks fell $10,000,000. The fall in this district was greater, which helped to account for the rise in discounting. In this district business loans continued to climb, rising $18,000,000, and brokers' loans jumped $31,000,000, probably reflecting loans to bond dealers for the purchase of bill issues.

Holiday Influence.

Holiday influence in the stock market today probably helped to improve the tone. This time the week-end is to be lengthened by a combination of Labor Day and religious holidays observed by many who ordinarily are active in speculation. If, as the Street has been saying, 'considerable selling has been taking place, the tendency to cover today and clear up accounts for the holidays was natural. On the other hand, few could be found who had not reduced their long positions as much as they intended to do already. Selling by longs today no doubt was based on general conditions, margin requirements and the like, rather than on a desire to be free from worry in a period when the market would be closed.

Stocks with numerous exceptions moved up a little. The heavy selling yesterday, comparatively speaking, seemed to exhaust the selling box rather than to precipitate an avalanche of losely held stock. Steel mounted rather quickly in the first half hour, fell back a little, and then rocked along a point or 2 up on the day. At its best it was about 3 points higher. A number of other industrial stocks regained 1 to 2 points, recoveries which looked to be rather firmly established in the late trading.

Farm Stocks Rise.

Farm implements were especially strong on the rally. Case rebounded more than 7 points at its best. International Harvester climbed more than 3 points. Sears Roebuck was buoyant with its 3 point advance. Montgomery Ward went ahead more slowly. Other stocks to rally 1 to 3 points were Zenith, Westinghouse, General Electric, Eastman Kodak, General Theater, Smelters, Steel Foundries, National Supply, Crucible, National Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, St. Joseph Lead, U. S. Smelting, Nickel, Homestake, Monsanto and others.

Rails as a group were stronger, but they made no great display. Central gained a point. Trading in the sugars tapered off. Rubbers were firm. Tobaccos edged forward by fractions.

Odd Lots.

"Each dollar of spendable income can now purchase about 15 per cent more of the manufactured goods and services that farmers consume. The American farmer is thus going to enjoy a very real prosperity. Business generally and particularly industries that serve the farming population directly, should benefit to a marked extent from this influence over the next 12 months." Delafield & Delafield market letter. . . . "Don't you think the Stock Exchange might do something about informing the public of individual, or at least the total, short sales of stocks? The broker knows, I presume the specialist knows, the lender knows, but the public never does."—Letter from Sun reader.

Insiders.

Brokerage house customers who purchase in lots of less than 100 shares continue to buy on balance. That tendency is likely to rise as prices fall, for stocks then look more attractive to the little fellow, who often pays for his shares outright and thinks of the long term. Trading for their own account the brokers have been largely sellers for some time. Whether influenced by the professional view or the facts on business that came to them, corporation directors and officials also have been going to the selling side, as shown by the July reports to the SEC. If insiders sold on the July recovery to a top well back to the former spring levels, their position is now a comfortable one, which shows the stock market advantages of being an insider, but in the long run the investor who takes his position and holds it often fares the best.

Ships Bring Silver, 3,175,000 Ounces

New York, Sept. 3 (AP).—A shipment of 3,175,000 ounces of silver, purchased for transport to this country during the recent weakness in price of the metal because of the Shanghai crisis, arrived here today from London on the liners Berengaria and Washington. It was consigned to private purchasers. At the time the market weakened it was reported in Wall street the United States Treasury was operating in the London market to support the price. Today's receipts indicated that private shippers were partly involved.

Trade Outlook Is Less Rosy For September

August Activity, However, Is 8 Per Cent Above Year Ago.

New York, Sept. 3.—Industrial activity as a whole compared most favorably in August with a year earlier, according to the monthly statistical summary of the Standard Statistics Co. The production index for the month, estimated at 98.7, was only slightly under the 1926 base of 100 and was 8 per cent above the index for August, 1936. The leading components of the index also made a nice showing compared with a year before.

The steel industry operated at around 84 per cent of capacity, against 78.5 per cent in July and 72.1 in August, 1936. Automobile output was off some 100,000 cars from the July total, but was still almost 30 per cent higher than the year before. Building contract awards were down just a trifle from August, 1936.

The outlook for industrial activity in September is a little less bright. The production index, corrected for seasonal variations, is estimated at a figure slightly under that of August. Steel and building awards will probably be lower and automobile production will be cut in half by the slowing up of assemblies caused by preparations for the new 1938 models. Manufacture of electricity and freight carloadings, on the other hand, are expected to be sharply higher.

Hawaiian Pineapple Co. Plans Stock Issue

Honolulu, Sept. 3 (AP).—Stockholders of Hawaiian Pineapple Co. voted approval today of management plans to raise $14,451,520 new capital. Sale of preferred stock will provide $10,000,000 of the new funds, the remaining $4,451,520 coming from sale of common stock.

The new money will be used to provide additional plant and warehouse facilities, improve plantation housing and recreational facilities for employes and to augment working capital. The 4,275 stockholders of the company will be offered rights to purchase new common stock in the ratio of one new share for each 5 shares held, at $20 a share.

Grade Crossing Fatalities Rise

An increase compared with the same month last year in the number of accidents and fatalities at hgihway grade crossings took place in May, 1937, the safety section of the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. In that month there were 313 accidents, an increase of 66, compared with May one year ago.

The number of fatalities resulting from those accidents totaled 132, compared with 119 in May, last year, while 371 persons were injured, an increase of 86 above one year ago.

Girl Reporter Is Escorted by A 'Professional'

Both Nervous at First, but Tension Eased as 'Date' Progresses.

he said, "and that's usually enough get them started." In my case he asked where I went to school, where my home was and whether I was interested in public affairs.

After that things went swimmingly. The first time conversation lagged, I asked him to tell me more about the escort bureau. "You're the first one that ever brought that up! Usually they're embarrassed to mention it," he commented.

Was a Life Guard Once.

An exchange of autobiographies disclosed that he graduated from a Southern university in 1936. A few months after receiving an M. A. in English literature from the same school, he came here from his home in Virginia to take a job with the Government. He had previously had temporary jobs, once as a life guard at Virginia Beach and once as a railway ticket agent in his native town.

Here he has dabbled with newspaper and radio work on the side. He joined the staff of the escort bureau early this summer at the suggestion of the receptionist, a debutante of a couple years ago and a friend of his.

"I get a great kick out of it," he says, "and needless to say I have no difficulty getting rid of the few pennies I pick up. I don't plan to make it my life work by any means, but I'll probably keep it up until something unpleasant happens."

He's had an average of about one "blind date"—his term for the arrangement—a week. He doesn't let his professional work interfere with his amateur social standing, however. He makes his own plans in advance, and if Miss Fulton cannot find him when she has a customer for him, she can always find someone else. He has never seen any of his fellow-workers but believes they range in age from about 20 to 35.

The first date was pretty bad, he says. "I was like this—" and he vibrated his hand to indicate a state of helpless jitters. "I haven't figured her out yet. She said she was from out of town but I knew from her address and from the fact that several people spoke to her that she was a Washingtonian.

"Why she wanted the date I don't know. Couldn't have been just curiousity about our set-up, because she was fidgety all evening. Since then I've suspected others of using the out-of-town angle as an excuse for phoning the bureau, but she's the first one I've been sure about."

Few Government Clients.

Many customers prove more particular than I was. They insist on inspecting photographs of the bureau's staff, just so they know what they're getting.

Two girls from the Interior Department might have avoided an embarrassing experience that way recently. They wanted to attend a departmental dance, telephoned for escorts and were mortified beyond words when the men turned out to be acquaintances from the same department. The men enjoyed the situation thoroughly, but the girls have had enough of the canned date system.

Few Government workers take advantage of the bureau, Jack told me. "Either they're scared to try it or they haven't money enough. It caters chiefly to out-of-town trade, not to the horrible goons here who can't get dates any other way."

So far his customers have behaved themseves like ladies. "But I know just what I'd do if one of them got drunk," he said with a determination which warned me to watch my step. "I'd turn her right over to the manager of the night club; say, 'Take her; she's all yours!' and let him have the responsibility of getting her home."

Not many of his customers try to "throw a line." "There wouldn't be any point to that," he explained. "Of course any woman will talk about herself when she gets a chance, so I hear a lot about their troubles. I'm getting to feel like a doctor; what they say goes in one ear and out the other."

One thing he worries about is whether he will be able to dance with the girl. "But I've had good luck so far. There was only one where it was a case of 'o. k.—you step on my toes and I'll step on yours.'" A good dancer himself, he has learned to adapt his style to the ability of his companion.

Nods to Friends.

"There's one question you must answer frankly," he told me as we arrived at the Shoreham Terrace. "If I run into friends of mine here, as I probably shall, do you want to be introduced?"

I expressed indifference and advised him to do as he saw fit. As a result, he merely nodded at the people he knew. The bureau has no regulation on the subject, he explained.

In fact the only restrictions placed on the escort, in addition to the rule against entering the girl's room, is that he shall average only one drink an hour and use taxis rather than his own car. "That's so I'll take you right home from here instead of going to some park," he added.

Half an hour before calling for his client, the escort must report to the receptionist. She passes on his mode of dress and his sobriety, and gives him any tips she can about that evening's job. "I'll let you in on something," he confided. "She told me you would be a tough nut to crack, but except for the fact that you make me do all the talking I have no complaint so far."

By this time it was midnight and my claim on his companionship was over. "But we'll stay just as long as you like," he said. All his customers say demurely that they must be home by midnight but change their minds as the evening progresses. And Jack gets soft-hearted and puts in a little overtime, gratis.

After one more dance we left. Unobtrusively he itemized the evening's expenses and returned what was left of the money.

Obedient to the rules of the game, he declined my invitation to come into the apartment. We shook hands and I complimented him on his proficiency as a "gentleman escort." "You call my boss and tell her about that," he said as he went down the corridor.

Octogenarian and Bride-to-Be

MISS CAROLINE R. HUGHES. DR. WALTER S. HARBAN.

Harris & Ewing Photos.

Methodist Bishop to Unite Daughter to Dr. W. S. Harban, Former Golf Champion Who Treated President.

Miss Hughes' father, resident bishop for the Washington area, Methodist Episcopal Church, will perform the ceremony in the imposing brick residence at 2107 Wyoming avenue, where the family has lived since Bishop Hughes came here from the Chicago area six years ago to assume his new duties.

Friends for Six Years.

Assisting Bishop Hughes in the wedding will be his son, Dr. Holt Hughes, pastor of the First M. E. Church in Indiana, Pa. Witnesses, restricted to members of the couple's families because of the illness of Bishop Hughes' wife, will include two other brothers of the bride, Ebbert M. Hughes, of Springfield, Mass., and Francis M. Hughes, of Indianapolis, and her sister, Mrs. William H. Ramy, of Indianapolis.

The friendship between Miss Hughes and the retired dentist who is 44 years her senior began when she and her parents became next door neighbors of Dr. Harban six years ago. His three-story, red brick home is at 2101 Wyoming avenue.

Miss Hughes, remaining at home constantly to care for her invalid mother, and Dr. Harban soon became fast friends. This is his second marriage, the first Mrs. Harban having died in 1926. The couple had no children.

Born in Howard County, Md., and trained in dentistry at the old Baltimore Dental College, Dr. Harban came to Washington to practice in 1877. Theodore Roosevelt engaged his services at the time he became a member of the Civil Service Commission. Dr. Harban was his dentist continuously until he relinquished the Presidency to William Howard Taft.

In those days, the bridegroom-to-be recalled yesterday, the President went to the dentist, contrary to the practice prevailing today. Roosevelt's visits to Dr. Harban's office near Fourteenth street and New York avenue more than once tied up carriage traffic, with hundreds of curious gathered about the building entrance.

Upon beginning his career, Dr. Harban made up his mind he would retire after 25 years' practice, but obtaining the famous Teddy as a patient altered that resolve. But Roosevelt had no sooner retired to private life than his dentist followed suit.

Dr. Harban was instrumental in organizing the greens section of the United States Golf Association, an orgiinization which he served five years as vice president. He helped found Columbia Country Club and for some ten years was its greens overseer.

An expert golfer—the mantel in his recreation room is loaded with tournament trophies—he all but gave up the game years ago to concentrate upon the improvement of greens. A stanch advocate of the razor-edge, close-clipped green, his "radical" tendencies in this direction set tongues to wagging all over the country two decades ago.

In 1924 the late John Barton Payne prevailed upon Dr. Harban to make recommendations for improvement of the greens at Burning Tree Club and the retired dentist has been a member of that committee ever since.

His bride-to-be is a native of Malden, Mass., and graduated from De Pau College, in Greencastle, Ind. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority.

Torpedoing of Freighters Blamed on 'Fascist Dogs and Cutthroats.'

The Timiriazev, a 1,075-ton ship, was torpedoed Monday night 5 miles off the Algerian coast near Tigzirt by a submarine identified by the vessel's captain as Italian.

"We will not tolerate these impudent Italian provocations," it said.

"The Soviet government, expressing the will of the masses, will be able to take care of the mad Italian Fascist bandits."

As Dictator Joseph V. Stalin and his defense commissars conferred within the Kremlin, word came that the conning tower of another mystery U-boat had been sighted in the Turkish Black Sea, vital link of Russian communications.

Russia has suffered most from the Mediterranean piracy during the past month as Spanish Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco has sought—allegedly with the aid of Italy—to prevent oil and coal supplies from reaching the ports of his loyalist enemy.

Maxim Litvinoff, Russian commissar of foreign affairs, was expected to insist on Soviet participation in the "massed action" in the Mediterranean and may attend the hurriedly called Mediterranean powers' conference at Geneva next Friday.

France, Britain, Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia and Egypt will participate, and Italy will be invited.

It was doubtful tonight, however, whether Premier Benito Mussolini would consent to "lay his cards on the table" at Geneva inasmuch as he has consistently boycotted all international parleys in the league capital.

British statesmen said he might consent to representation because of the inference of guilt which might be attached to a refusal.

Meanwhile in Washington, United States Navy Department officials, stressing the United States is "a disinterested neutral" and does not expect to be involved, said nevertheless commanders of American warships in the Mediterranean had been instructed to fire in self defense if their craft should be attacked.

Italy Indicates Retaliation for Piracy Parley

By the United Press.

Rome, Sept. 3.—The controlled Fascist press, enraged by the French-British call for a conference of Mediterranean powers to deal with submarine piracy, hinted tonight Italy would not let such an "insidious affront" pass without retaliation.

Italian newspapers joined as one in angrily resenting what they termed an attempt to exclude Italy from the Geneva Mediterranean discussions.

Mussolini, according to diplomatic sources, is maneuvering to wreck the plan for international "war" against the mystery submarines or obtain its radical modification.

Il Duce was said to blame France for precipitating the Geneva meeting, scheduled for September 10, and for magnifying suspicions Italian submarines were responsible for attacks on neutral ships.

The press, characterizing the "war on piracy" as a "vicious anti-Fascist maneuver," said it failed to understand why Great Britain accepted France's suggestion without first insisting on an invitation to Italy.

"To place Italy in the position of not being able to attend a conference where problems are to be discussed concerning a sea which for us is our life really is equivalent to assuming a policy of open unfriendliness," La Tribuna said.

Bob Burns Says—

The reason a big city gets the name of bein' cold is on account of the lack of trust people have in each other. It's so different in a small town where everybody knows and trusts each other.

I remember one time I went in a restaurant down home to get somethin' to eat and the check was 35 cents. When I went to pay, I found that I had left my money in my other pair of pants and I told the proprietor I didn't have the money with me. He says, "Oh, that's all right—I'll just mark your name up here on the wall and say you owe me 35 cents."

I says, "Well, that's gonna be kinda embarrassin, to have my name up there on the wall where everybody can see it," and he says, "Oh, you don't have'ta worry about that—they won't see it. Your coat'll be hangin' over it!"

Mikado 'Regrets' China Fails to Understand Peace Aims

Hirohito Opens Diet for Record Martial Budget

Funds Asked by Cabinet Surpass Total of the Last Two Wars.

By the United Press.

Tokyo (Saturday), Sept. 4.—Emperor Hirohito of Japan, in his speech from the throne opening an emergency session of the Diet today, said China provoked the current hostilities and he regretted China's failure to understand the true intentions of his nation.

The Emperor opened Parliament at 11 a. m.

"Japan always has been solicitous of attaining peace in East Asia by mutual co-operation with China," the Emperor said.

Japanese soldiers fighting in China are displaying devotion to their country by overcoming all difficulties there, the Emperor said. Their actions are intended only to persuade China to reconsider her anti-Japanese attitude and thereby lead to re-establishment of the peace in eastern Asia, he added.

War Funds Boosted.

Tokyo, Sept. 3.—The cabinet today approved an increase of Japan's war fund for the campaigns in China to approximately $737,000,000.

With more than 500,000,000 yen ($145,000,000) already appropriated, the ministers approved a third supplementary budget for 2,042,000,000 yen (about $592,000,000), more than the empire spent altogether on its wars with China in 1894-95 and Russia in 1904-05.

Cabinet approval was hastened to prepare the appropriations for adoption by a special session of the Diet Saturday, when Emperor Hirohito will read his message from the throne.

The new appropriations set aside 2,000,000,000 yen ($580,000,000) for the army and navy. Finances for all other government departments were concerned directly or indirectly with the war. They included:

Foreign office—9,100,000 yen ($2,639,000), partly for the evacuation of Japanese citizens from China; home office—18,200,000 yen ($5,268,000, including an appropriation for military aid and air defense; finance—7,000,000 yen ($2,030,000), covering costs of war financing; justice—2,200,000 yen ($638,000) to buy materials for convicts to make into munitions.

Allotments were made for enforcing air defense in the Japanese possessions of Formosa and Saghalien.

The newspaper Asahi said the calmness and aloofness of the United States in the hostilities "must be greatly appreciated."

Confucianism To Be Restored In North China

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, Sept. 3.—Peiping's conquerors today prepared to restore much of the Confucian ritual of the old imperial court of China, and many Chinese believe they also would bring back the one-time boy emperor Hsuan Tung—now Emperor Kang Teh of Manchukuo—to sit again on the dragon throne.

Restoratiton of Confucian worship which had been all but abandoned in China under the nationalist regime, was a feature of the changes wrought by Japan when she established her protectorate over Manchukuo.

Japanese officers here have arranged for a spectacular Confucian revival next Monday. The ancient rites will replace the ceremonial of the Chinese republic, against which Japan is waging an undeclared war. The Japanese here, as in Manchukuo, hope to appeal powerfully to Chinese conservatism by restoration of the old ways.

Meanwhile all schools remained closed, partly because of lack of funds but chiefly to give time for thorough revision of textbooks, expunging all anti-Japanese matter and replacing it by praise of the regime that is to come.

American Envoys Split on Attending Nazi Party Rally

By the Associated Press.

Two high-ranking American diplomats accredited to Germany apparently have split on whether the United States should be represented at the forthcoming Nazi party congress at Nuremberg.

Well informed persons reported yesterday Ambassador William E. Dodd, now in this country, has criticized the plans of Prentiss Gilbert, charge d'affaires in Berlin, to attend the Nuremberg gathering with other foreign diplomatic representatives.

Dodd voiced his criticism to Secretary Hull, it was said.

Stamp 'Incident' Rouses Honduras

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Sept. 3 (AP).—Patriotic buttons that said "Defend Your Homeland" sold rapidly in Honduras today, and there were popular expressions of indignation over a "postage stamp incident" with Nicaragua.

Liberals who have been cool toward President Carias sent him a message offering their support following the receipt of letters from Nicaragua, Honduras' southern neighbor, with stamps that bore a map of a large section of Honduran territory. The stamps designated this border area as "disputed." Hondurans said the stamps constituted an affront to their country's sovereignty.

8 Troop Boats Flee Chinese Guns on River

The Japanese blamed their military reverses of the last two days on the fact their airplanes have refrained for a week from bombing Chinese concentration areas in the densely populated Nantao and Yangtsepoo districts.

"The Japanese soon will strike with increased ferocity," the Japanese spokesman declared," and Chinese military activities in Shanghai will be terminated."

U. S. Ships in Line of Fire.

"Japanese advance objectives," would be quickly achieved, the spokesman declared cryptically, without defining the objectives or indicating what greater force would be applied than the large army and navy forces already in action in the Shanghai battle zone.

Chief result of China's renewed attacks was to bring the war back to Shanghai's front door. All day Friday and through the night it raged over the heart of the harbor, with the United States flagship Augusta and other foreign warships in line of fire.

Early today flames were licking through Pootung and other areas already badly burned over, their glare silhouetting the Japanese and foreign men-of-war on the Whangpoo.

Planes Raid Pootung.

Japanese warplanes carried out a night raid on Pootung, trying to blast out the Chinese batteries that had subjected their ships and shore positions to a day of heavy punishment.

French military and consular authorities prepared to protect departure of 650 refugees, including many Americans, who were to be taken down the Whangpoo early today to board the French liner Sphinx, bound for Hongkong and southern ports.

The river battle presented grave perils for passenger tenders, but the French bluntly notified both Japanese and Chinese they expected hostilities would be "withheld" during the evacuation.

Six Foreigners Wounded.

Police of the International areas estimated 50 persons, including half a dozen foreigners, were wounded by shells, apparently from both sides, which fell in those areas Friday. There were no American casualties.

A projectile struck the roof of the United States Marine barracks, but failed to explode.

Greater danger for American and other foreign warships was indicated. A Japanese navy spokesman said its vessels, rather than continue to submit to heavy pounding from the Chinese land batteries, would shift into positions from which they could reply effectively, regardless of dangers to which foreign men of war might be exposed.

For nearly a week the principal theater of war had been the southern bank of the Yangtze River from Woosung, at the confluence of the Whangpoo, westward for about 20 miles to Liuho. Along that shore the Japanese have been trying for two weeks to land their new army.

Early Friday Chinese shore batteries, especially in Pootung, began pounding the Japanese at Shanghai. The gunners scored three direct hits on the Japanese consulate-general on the Whangpoo waterfront. Three Japanese consular policemen and a Japanese newspaperman were wounded seriously.

Many Japanese sailors on shore or shipboard were killed or wounded. Many Japanese civilians in the Hongkew district, which the Japanese hold, were reported killed. A Japanese naval spokesman said grimly, "There will be retribution."

U. S. Ship Runs Gantlet.

The United States Navy's supply ship Gold Star ran the gantlet of shell fire down the Whangpoo to evacuate about 100 wives and children of American Marines. Bound for Kobe, Japan, it was the first American refugee ship to leave Shanghai since the Chinese air bombing of the liner President Hoover Monday.

Chinese officers said 200 Japanese had been killed in an unsuccessful attempt to land on Pootung Point, opposite the Japanese consulate-general.

Foreign naval observers speculated on the next phase of Japanese strategy. The Japanese were believed to have some 60,000 men, army units and marines, ashore in the Shanghai battle zone, and to have almost as many more on troopships in the Yangtze and Whangpoo rivers or en route from Japan.

Authoritative estimates placed the Chinese forces engaged around Shanghai at 200,000, with possibly 300,000 more held in the Shanghai-Nanking area.

Bloody fighting continued with hardly a pause along the Woosung-Lotien-Liuho line north of Shanghai, and the Japanese admitted heavy losses in their attempts to drive inland from the Yangtze. Less than a score survived the effort of a Japanese infantry company to relieve a village near Lotien surrounded by 5,000 Chinese.

The Japanese were said to have forded a creek breast deep only to run into a withering fire. In quick succession the company commander, lieutenant and sergeant major were killed and command fell to a corporal.

South Coast Shelled.

Tokyo (Saturday), Sept. 4 (U.P.).—A dispatch to the newspaper Asahi from Maku, Formosa, today said Japanese destroyers arrived yesterday off Amoy on the Southern Chinese coast opposite the Island of Formosa and began shelling Chinese airdromes, forts and other military centers.

Japanese Shelling of Nantao Threatens Million Civilians

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Special Cable.

Shanghai, Sept. 4.—A further Japanese bombardment of Nantao, the densely populated section of Shanghai adjacent to the French concession, is foreshadowed by the Japanese naval announcement of intention to take "drastic action designed to terminate unlawful Chinese activities."

This declaration by the Japanese naval authorities followed a vigorous artillery duel which continued all day between the Chinese and Japanese forces, inflicting further serious damage in scattered portions of the city. It is apparently the Chinese intention to delay Japan's big drive and if possible to gain control of Shanghai before the invasion from the Yangtze can make headway.

The authorities of the French concession are taking emergency precautions against a further influx from Nantao's crowded population. Iron gates and barriers have been erected to keep out the Chinese noncombatants, already panic-stricken from previous shellings and aerial bombardments.

The bombardment of Nantao with a refugee-swollen population of over a million in this area alone will inevitably result in the virtual butchery of civilians unable to escape because of the absence of communications.

Yesterday's bombardment caught this correspondent in Broadway, one of the principal streets in the northern part of the International Settlement, with Chinese shells exploding on all sides. One which landed in the Japanese Consulate nearby caused severe destruction.

Thousands of newly landed Japanese soldiers were visibly affected by the humid heat of Shanghai and were resting along the shell-scarred streets as I returned from the burned-out and desolated Yangtszepoo district. Although a part of the International Settlement, this has been taken over as a Japanese base.

With the exception of a thin line of Japanese bluepackets fringing the border of this district, the entire northern and eastern section of the International Settlement, where Japanese properties are concentrated, have been taken over by the Japanese regulars.

China May Raid Japanese Cities With U.S. Planes

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 3.—The freighter Wichita steamed toward the Orient tonight bearing 20 super-speed planes which, if delivered safely, would enable China better to carry the undeclared war with Japan to the enemy's home territory.

The Wichita, which sailed from Baltimore last Friday, was due at San Pedro, Calif., about September 15 on the first leg of its hazardous voyage.

Aviation experts declared the planes were capable of spanning the Yellow Sea to Japan with bomb loads of half a ton each, and returning safely to Chinese bases.

First Intended for France.

Purchased by the central Chinese government, the planes—originally built by the Bellanca Aircraft Co. for the French Colonial Mail Service—have top speeds of 280 miles an hour, well above that of the fastest Japanese warplane listed in Jane's "All the World's Aircraft for 1936."

Each plane can carry 1,060 pounds of bombs and enough gasoline for more than 1,000 miles, and can outclimb the military aircraft upon which Japan depends for defense.

Students of aviation asserted that should the Wichita evade an unofficial blockade of China, the monoplanes may play a part in the Eastern conflict far out of proportion to their numbers.

Faster Than Japan's Pride.

	Bellan.	Naka. AN-1.

Soong Warns Of 'World War,' Asks Sanctions

Governor of Bank of China Calls Upon Nations to Halt Invasion.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai, Sept. 3.—T. V. Soong, governor of the Bank of China, tonight called on the United States and other democratic powers to apply economic sanctions to Japan to halt her invasion of China, which, he said, is a prelude to a new world war.

"The one measure that will stop Japanese militarism and avert a world war is the application of economic sanctions by democratic powers everywhere," Soong, a Harvard graduate and friend of many American financiers, declared.

Soong said it was cheering to hear American labor organizations were threatening to refuse to transport war materials.

"Japan, victorious over a prostrate China, would have untold resources and would be a deadly menace to every peace-loving country," he said.

U.S. and Britain Work Together In China Crisis

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull, restating his policy of international co-operation, said yesterday America and Great Britain have been working in close consultation in meeting the problems of the strife in China.

With this he coupled an announcement that the department had issued the strongest possible warnings to Americans to evacuate the danger zone immediately. Naval vessels, he said, are ready to take them out of the area.

At the same time, Commerce Department figures showed that China bought more American aircraft in the first six months of 1936 than did any other nation. Its total was $2,415,922. Japan, which has its own plane making facilities, bought $832,833 in the same period.

U. S. Policy Flexible.

The Red Cross authorized its 3,700 chapters to accept contributions for relief work in China. The Red Cross does not, however, contemplate a national campaign for such contributions nor does it intend sending personnel to China.

Hull told correspondents that, broadly speaking, American foreign policy is one of separate and independent action, but there naturally must be some flexibility where the conditions, purposes and policies of other nations are similar to those of this country.

In such instances, he said, there would be consultation, exchanges of information and suggestions, with each nation preserving its own freedom of action and responsibility.

Damage Unestimated.

That sort of co-operation, he emphasized, is not joint action, either technically or practically, but embodies what he and others have felt to be the most practicable method of dealing with the rapidly developing problems of the Far East.

In response to a question, he said his primary object has been to protect the lives of Americans; that he had been so busy with the personal side of the problem that he had no time to assemble figures on property losses.

State Department officials meanwhile cling to their attitude that no necessity exists for invoking the American neutrality act, forbidding shipments of war supplies to belligerents.

War Loans Protested.

Purchases of munitions abroad to feed Japan's costly war machine shot her unfavorable trade balance for the first six months of 1937 to $175,000,000—the peak since 1924—figures released by the Commerce Department showed yesterday.

Machinery Exports Rise.

By the Associated Press.

Industrial machinery exports hit an eight-year peak in July, while farm equipment exports exceeded those of any month since February, 1931, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.
